U.S. Marines Battle Lebanese Militiamen

Beirut, Lebanon - U.S. Marines battled Lebanese militia in a clash in central Beirut yesterday. A Marine spokesman said it was believed the militia fired upon the marines.

Telephone Operators Get Back on the Job

Telephone operators began returning to work yesterday after a three-week nationwide strike against American Telephone and Telegraph (AT&T) and with local agreements between a union and the last of 84 Bell System subsidiaries.

"As soon as the picket lines came down, some of the people came into the offices, even though they weren't scheduled to work, just to celebrate together," said Bob Bells, a spokesman for Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. in Little Rock, Ark. "There was absolute jubilation."

Tentative agreement on the last local contracts was reached at 2:06 AM yesterday between the Communications Workers of America and two A&T subsidiaries, Bell of Pennsylvania and Western Electric, said CWA spokeswoman Rosanne Weissman.

Union officials said those returning to work and relieving management personnel were operators and others scheduled to work yesterday. The rest of the 84,000 employees wouldn't be able to go back to work today at regular starting times.

Even though a national agreement was reached Aug. 21, negotiators of the strike, which is still being held up by local negotiations between CWA and the 84 Bell subsidiaries.

CWA President Chenz Watts said the union would not return to work until all 84 local agreements were concluded. Most of the 150,000 members of two other unions that struck A&T, the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers and the Telecommunications International Union, honored CWA picket lines even though they had signed their own agreements.

There were no American casualties. The president was informed and will continue to be informed.

Three mortar rounds fell earlier in the area of the airport held by the 1,500-man U.S. Marines contingent of the multinational peacekeeping force, but no Americans were injured, Marine Maj. Robert Jordan said.

Late yesterday, state-run Beirut radio reported that Christians and Druse militia traded artillery and rocket fire in the Aley Mountains, six miles east of the capital. Beirut radio and television stations also reported that fighting in low-income suburbs south of the city resumed following a late afternoon lull.

Shiite militia opened up with machine guns and rocket-propelled grenades when Lebanese army units tried to enter the areas to restore order after a day of clashes between the soldiers and the gunmen, the reports said.

Striking Opera Musicians to Vote on Contract

New York - Members of the New York City Opera orchestra have been asked to vote today on a tentative contract agreement that could end seven weeks of strikeround silence.

Monsignor James Hasy, chairman of the State Mediation Board, said the draft contract was hammered out yesterday during nine and one-half hour meeting as a result of new proposals by management. "I am not at liberty to disclose details of the tentative agreement,"

The New York Times said management's final offer increased the number of guaranteed work weeks for musicians - the key issue in the dispute.

The 21 work weeks for the first year of the contract, 24 the second an immediate possibilities: He could retract his decision, or resign and form a new coalition, or call an election. Israeli Television said the latter was the most likely, adding that the voting would probably be held jointly with municipal elections already set for Oct. 25.

If Begin chooses not to head the next government, the strongest contender for the post in Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir, 68, one of the few politicians still alive who go back with Begin to his days as a guerrilla leader fighting the British and Arabs for Israeli independence.

The most popular candidate, according to the poll, is Defense Minister Ariel Sharon, 67, but he has to be elected to the Knesset, Israel's parliament, in order to serve as prime minister.

25. The third, with the possibility of more if work can be found, The Times said.

Leonard Leibowitz, chief negotiator for the striking orchestra, said 89 musicians had been invited to accept or reject the proposed pact at 5 PM today in the Manhattan office of Local 922 of the American Federation of Musicians.

"We're hoping everyone will show up, of course, but some people may be out of town," Leibowitz said.

The Academic Dilemma of the Active Student

By Elisabeth Wasserman

Polity Vice-President Barry Ribello was academically suspended for a semester during the course of the summer but, with an appeal, he had that time period waived. "Clearly my involvement with Polity, my involvement in extra-curricular activities had something to do with it," Ribello said.

It was at this time last year that students were hearing that then-Polity President Adina Finkelstein was dismissed from the university, not recognized as holding her position in Polity, and in the process of presenting her second appeal to the Committee on Academic Standing and Appeals (CASA).

News Analysis

These examples are not new to Polity, or to other students involved in extra-curricular activities that are not academic. Regardless of what the individual problems of those two Polity officials were, their academic problems were such that students who had held high positions or high levels of responsibility in campus organizations had bad grade problems in doing so.

"I've seen not only poor grades but students lessening academic loads and having to stay on extra years here," said Norman Pruslin, general manager of the campus radio station WUSB (90.1 FM), who has been at the university since 1969. Pruslin said that a lot of people, including faculty, administrators and other students, are unaware of the time and responsibility commitments of the students involved with the services that round out campus life. The extra-curricular activities are sometimes as important as their classes, he said.

"And Stony Brook doesn't always have academic opportunities for people to translate these experiences into academic achievement," he said.

And the problem of retaining a student status while performing in an extra-curricular position is not exclusive to Polity Vice-President Ron Spanier. Pruslin has five editors-in-chief that the Stony Brook Press has had have been kicked out of school a combined total of ten times.

"Sometimes you save for his class size to at least average for his class in order to maintain a seat," said Joe Caponi, the present editor of the Press. "In teams, the accounts for one of those mentioned dismissals. Caponi was dismissed in January after failing to meet the minimum standards for the legal team of the state court.

The problem is the same with the students involved in various campus public relations and the radio station. "It's going to be an experiment. It's the first time something like this has been done," said a student who said that the class will discuss how the media "covers" Stony Brook, how the media works at other universities and will have lectures from prominent people. "It was a long time coming for sure," Pruslin said, adding that he had been pressing for such a class for a long time.

It is true that one of the first problems Spanier addressed since assuming the position last fall was that of ways which students could use independent study classes in getting credit for their extracurricular activities. In a memo dated Oct. 22,1982 to University Senate President Ronald Douglas, Spanier suggested that the academic credit could be used for within existing policies of the university. The memo stated "I want to go on record as opposing academic credit for work-related or activity-related endeavors unless there is specifically an academic component supervised by an appropriate faculty member" and went on to suggest ways that student newspaper workers or Polity officials could receive credit for the work they do if sponsored by a faculty member.

But Ribello maintains that for the work some people do, they should be able to get credit for it without

Rare Wheeler in Road Rally

By Carolyn Broida

Wearing Achilles wings on his head rather than on his heels, Brian Henschel, a senior psychology student at Stony Brook, completed a 72-mile round trip course in a wheelchair in order to raise money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association (MDA) Saturday.

The road rally, sponsored by the Ridge 7-Eleven store to raise money for its annual MDA fund raising campaign, attracted 25 other entrants, all of whom rode bicycles. John Roes, organizer of the rally, said he was surprised when he found out Henschel was intent on entering the rally. "I didn't realize he was in a wheelchair until I met him," Roes said.

Saying nothing could have stopped him from wheeling the round trip course from Ridge to Greenport along Route 25, Henschel convinced MDA officials worried about his health to let him participate in the rally. "I like to get involved in anything where I can use my wheels as a way to do something for those who can't...I knew I could count on support to make it worthwhile," Henschel said, who also wheeled to the U.N. building in New York City last November to demonstrate against world hunger.

Henschel collected more than 250 names, amounting to more than an estimated $1,000 in pledges. Mostly collected from the campus, the pledgers included University President John Marburger, Robert Francis, vice-president for Campus Operations and Fred Preston, vice-president for Student Affairs. "I think of it as Stony Brook supporting me to do my bit," Henschel said.

Supported and aided by the Tiger Team, Henschel, who calls himself Tigerman "because they're a determined animal with a lot of fight in them," made his way along the narrow shoulder of Route 25 in his wheelchair decorated with an orange reflecting tape in order to be more visible to passing motorists. Trailing slowly and closely behind, Frank Lebe drove a van flashing an amber colored light on the roof and a white sheet painted with black letters on the rear warning motorists to beware. "I get a sense of community from this wheeling," he said. "I urge everybody to get up from the sidelines."

Taking a break seven miles into the trip, minutes from the second check-in point in Riverhead, Henschel urged his friends to get started again. "The most important thing is the breathing and keeping the pace," Henschel said before the rally. "You have to learn how to roll on the flat surfaces and let the momentum of the chair take itself. I keep the pace up for as many hours as possible."

Twenty-eight and one-half hours and a flat tire later, Henschel rolled into the Ridge 7-Eleven parking lot, his last step, planning to buy a couple of six packs of beer, going home and putting his mind into school.

"I like wheeling and riding to keep a sense of freedom and to show that people who are disabled can still raise money for charities," said Henschel, who is already planning his next stunt, a wheel twice around Manhattan. "I'm glad I found my niche."

Compliance To Solomon Amendment
Postponed to Oct. 1

By Glenn J. Taverna

Compliance to the Solomon Amendment, a regulation tying receipt of financial aid to draft registration compliance and verification, has again been postponed -- for the fourth time -- until October 1.

The amendment was originally passed into law last year. Asking that guidelines be established for the amendment's implementation, the Reagan Administration set July 1, 1983 as the date the amendment would take effect. A few weeks before the implementation date, and resulting from a lawsuit brought in Minnesota by six students, U.S. District Judge Donald Alsup imposed an injunction on the Solomon Amendment, barring the Department of Education from enforcing the law. Alsup called the law "unconstitutional and unduly burdensome to students who need financial aid to attend college."

On June 29 -- two days before the original July 1 implementation date -- the U.S. Supreme Court stepped in and lifted the injunction. The nation's highest court will let the law stand until it considers an appeal to be filed by the U.S. government. It is not known how long this will take.

"I am aware of an article in the Chronicle of Higher Education, the Department of Education soon after extended the effective date of the Solomon Amendment for another month -- to August 1 -- "to give colleges time to respond to the Supreme Court order."

The Education Department -- responding to complaints from college officials who said they needed more time to prepare to administer the Solomon Amendment -- agreed to extend the effective date of the amendment to Sept. 1, according to the Chronicle article.

The Senate stepped in and voted earlier this month "to extend [the effective date] for yet another month, [to] Oct. 1," according to the Chronicle article.

The Solomon Amendment requires students to provide their respective colleges with a personal statement of draft registration compliance and verification of such compliance.

Although Stony Brook is required, according to the amendment, to collect from students both a statement of compliance and verification from the Selective Service Office, Stony Brook's Financial Aid Director Jack Joyce said his office will not ask for verification. He called the request for verification an "incredible administrative burden."

having to attend a class or take exams. He agreed with Spansier that faculty sponsors and term papers might have to be required. He thinks there should be credit given "for any extra-curricular activities where there is clearly a learning process involved. When you're taking a class it's a responsibility; so is this," he said. Such positions he gave as examples are: people involved in editor capacity of the newspapers, radio station, Polity officials, managers of student-run businesses such as the Rainy Night House, Ambulance Corps workers, people of responsibility in the Student Activities Board (SAB), etc. "Other universities offer credit for this kind of work, called non-traditional academic experience," he said, but did not mention any examples. And he sees students are hesitant about getting involved in activities if they see no personal reward for their work. "In some instances we have to make these positions, which should be all academically recognized positions, into paid positions just to fill them," he said.

But if a student is paid for work on a campus activity, thin university guidelines prohibit them from receiving academic credit, Morton Rechler, an executive officer of CASA told one Statesman reporter. And, he said, that is "true in almost any college in the United States with very, very few exceptions."

It is wish no pay (with exception to certain stipended positions), no bed waivers (aside from those offered to groups over the summer), and no credit a wonder that many students are still holding office. On this campus there are at least four undergraduates that are presidents of corporations. And these people sometimes "work on weekends and late at night, without the sleep schedule necessary to perform as a student," Prusslin said. In his opinion, moves are being made at Stony Brook in a positive direction for these students. With his class and a few others such as the sociology class Student Leadership they are finally easing the class loads for these students.

But Wagner is critical of the media class and does not plan to take it. He said, "The people who really suffer for a lack of credits are the upperclassmen. By and large, upperclassmen need upper level classes. I think making this course a 299 was really a cheap shot."

Some see the course as progress, but only a small step. "I think Stony Brook is light years behind in set-up a major degree program in communications and media," said Dave Goodman, a graduate of Stony Brook who served as news director of WUSB for one semester. "I know from my own experience that I put less time into traditional school work than I put into time at the radio station," he said. "Overall, yes, I think it was worth it."

While it may not satisfy everyone it is offered to, it is more than was offered Chris Fairhall when he was a student from 1977 to 82, and a Polity Treasurer who had worked on both Statesman and the Press. "I think it's a great idea," Fairhall said. "If they had a course like that when I was going here I would have graduated on time and my grade-point average would have been better," he said. He said the situation was worse like that when I was going here I would have graduated last semester. "I would consider the station But because of the occupational goals she has, spend doing nothing," she said of her involvement with WUSB as of the spring semester. "I would consider the time I spend here as the time that I otherwise would have spent doing nothing," she said of her involvement with the station. But because of the occupational goals she has, she said, "I definitely look at this as getting more than a three-credit course called Coaching Football at SUNY Albany for football players."

"I think stipends are absolutely necessary. Just being a member of a student government means you go through a lot of money," Tierney said. He said that the entire executive branch of the student association at SUNY Albany receive $2250 each a year and at SUNY Oswego the president of the student government receives $2,600 a year and the other officials a little less. While he hasn't seen many stipends given to newspaper officials, the ones he has heard of are much smaller amounts.

The Polity Council at Stony Brook received stipends of $1,500 each for working during the summer this year, as was the case last summer. Statesman's editor-in-chief received $150 last semester and other directors and editors received $100 and $50, respectively. The stipend amounts at Statesman were lower than they had been in past semesters, where the editor-in-chief was receiving up to $800 per semester, because of the newspaper's financial problems.

But while the problems some students have in balancing their school work with their other activities is reoccurring, there are exceptions to this rule. "I can't speak for everyone, but I actually did better last semester than in the fall," said Dina Gabriel, news director of WUSB as of the spring semester. "I would consider the time I spend here as the time that I otherwise would spend doing nothing," she said of her involvement with the station. But because of the occupational goals she has, she said, "I definitely look at this as getting more than a three-credit course called Coaching Football at SUNY Albany for football players."

The question that remains is whether the problem is inherent in the institution or within the individual attracted to it.

Record SB Enrollment Takes Toll on Housing

Robert Francis, vice-president for Campus Operations, said it could be up to three years before the University begins construction.

Until then, enrollments will continue to rise. According to projections provided, Graham Spanier, vice-provost for Undergraduate Studies, the University will admit about 1,000 more students in 1987 than it does now. "SUNY Central would like us to take more students," Spanier said. "We could grow if we had the right kind of support."

Javitz Returns to SB

Former Senator Jacob Javits who donated his papers to the University's library about two years ago, returned to campus last week and plans to stay in the area for a month working on his collection, and possibly lecturing to classes. The 79-year-old Republican, who represented New York in the United States for 24 years, will be living in the Three Village Inn and commuting to campus on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Javits could not be reached for comment.

Javits flew to New York from California where he was receiving an experimental treatment for the degenerative nerve disorder he suffers from, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, also known as "Lou Gehrig's disease." The treatment for the disease which has left him confined to a wheelchair involves intravenous injections of hormones and is based on a theory connecting the disease with a metabolic imbalance in the brain.

Javits made a similar visit to the campus last year where he was organizing the collection which engulfed his role in subjects that have come to national attention in the past 30 years—civil rights, limiting the president's power to declare war, and employment among others. A $250,000 grant for rebuilding the special collections unit of the library where the papers are housed was made last year by the state legislature.

Welcome Back

It's hard to believe that another summer has flown by and we have arrived at the time of the year when beaches give way to lectures, reading assignments term papers and, yes, even school newspapers.

To those students and faculty members who are new to Stony Brook we would like to take this opportunity to wish you the best of luck for the new semester and sincerely hope that you make the most out of your stay here. We also wish all the best for the new academic year to the many returning members of the campus community.

A great deal has happened at Stony Brook over the summer. Tuition has been increased throughout the SUNY system, the university has announced its intentions to construct new housing units. James Black has resigned as vice-president of University Affairs, controversy engulfed an African Studies professor when he was charged with suggesting that Zionism was a form of racism and the question of arming University Police is yet to be fully resolved.

Whether you are a freshman, transfer or returning student, it is hoped that you will pursue some of the many activities that are available at Long Island's largest academic center.

For now, though, don't give up finding your way from your room to your classes or getting along with your new roommate or suite mate. After a couple of weeks, it should start to feel like home....

Letters

Something New

To the Editor:

(The following is an open letter to the campus community.)

This year you will be seeing something new on the Stony Brook campus. That "something new" is called the Community Services Unit. Due to concerns raised by people such as yourself, concern which deal with the safety and security of the Stony Brook campus, the Department of Public Safety has expanded the Community Services Unit.

What is the Community Services Unit? The Community Services Unit is a group of professionally trained Student Employment/Work Study students, who have been hired by the Department of Public Safety. They have been trained in such areas as communications, patrol functions, CPR and multimedia first aid, to name a few.

What do they do? The Community Services Unit (CSU) runs a number of different programs on the Stony Brook campus.

1. Campus Patrol—members of our unit patrol the Stony Brook campus between the hours of 7 PM and 2 AM. While on patrol, the patrollers in our unit act as deterrents to crime and vandalism. Any acts of crime and vandalism are reported to the University Police Department. The CSU is a non-intervention patrol unit which acts only as the eyes and ears for our police department.

2. Campus Escort Service—The CSU will continue to offer a walk service to members of the campus community. A phone call is all it takes to have a team of two CSU personnel meet you anywhere on campus and see you safely to your destination.

3. Special Events Division—If you would like the CSU to handle the security for your special event, please make your request at least 1 week in advance. A special team will be set up to handle your event, thus freeing the current team to take more time to enjoy the event that they have set up.

4. Handicapped Program—Due to concerns of accessibility, the handi-capped and safety hazards, these reports are then routed to the proper campus department so that they may act on these reports.

Other programs that the CSU is involved in deal with reporting other safety hazards, an energy conservation program, and a community outreach program.

Why are we doing this? Gary Barnes and Doug Little from the Department of Public Safety have expanded this program in response to requests from the campus community for the improvement of the level of safety and security on our campus. We, the students of the CSU are happy to assist and work in this program because, as Barnes and Little care about the Stony Brook community, so do we. The Community Services Unit is a "Students for Stony Brook" organization. Our logo is one which shows the "helping hands." We have been recognized by the department of Public Safety as a vital division in that department and we are proud to serve you, the campus community. We hope you will support us in the work we do. Together we can make the Stony Brook campus safe and secure. Thank You.

Philip Gleserberg, Supervisor
The Community Services Unit

The Police in Concert:
Better than Ever

By Theresa Lohn

Four years ago the Police landed at La Guardia Airport with hopes of conquering America. In a beat-up old van, they barnstormed America, playing their unique blend of pop and reggae to small, yet curi-ous audiences. Their first performance in New York City was at CBGB's, an infamous club on the Bowery. A year later they played The Bottom Line, The Palladium, and finally The Ritz. In the subsequent two years, they managed to sell-out Madison Square Garden, not once but twice.

Thursday night, August 18, the Police crossed through New York City again, this time landing in Shea Stadium. To paraphrase Sting, the Shea Stadium date was heaven because nothing short of heaven would make someone stand seven and a half hours in a rain-soaked stadium to see and hear the Police.

The concert began with a very brief set by R.E.M. The opening song “Murphy’s Law” had everyone up and jumping. By the end of the second song the skies opened up and the rains came, sending pop patrons scurrying for cover. R.E.M.’s current single, “Radio Free Europe” received the most applause but true to their sold-out Madison Square Garden and finally The Ritz. In the subse-quent performance at the stadium spellbound with the Police.

“Every Breath You Take,” the crowd went wild that the song seemed about to collapse. From that song on, the concert was all uphill. A mini-collage of their greatest hits, “ Roxanne,” “So Lonely,” and “Can’t Stand Losing You,” closed the show on a positive note.

The Police might have been 150 yards from many people there that night, but never before did the Police feel so close. They overcame the big stadium’s impersonality and made August 18, a night to remember.

Black and white photos of Billy Joel and his band, dressed legs up as a streetwise, cover this album. Their outfits look like half-hearted, embarrassed attempts to dress like kids. The poses look strained. The tenses-ment stoom they pose on looks phony; something from a “Bow-ery Boys” movie.

The album jacket should be a clue to the prospective buyer as to what’s inside. It seems like Joel is desperately trying to recapture lost innocence. But whether it’s his, or just innocence in general, isn’t really clear.

In The Stranger and Turnstiles Billy Joel gave an honest and exciting account of youth at a time when he was chronologically closer to it. But instead of those sensitive reflections on the past, here he tries to immerse himself in it by clothing his music in the styles of 20 years ago. Almost all of the 10 songs are produced in a style which can be directly traced to some artist of the late fifties or early sixties. The first track of the first side, “Easy Money,” has the upbeat, streetwise feel of the music of Sam and Dave.

“A New Innocent Man,” has a fairly pretty melody, and some of the most straightforward lyrics the album offers. But here’s where the first hint of disappointment-to-come settles in. The song sounds like a washed out version of what Joel has shown he can do with a serious song. The music doesn’t inspire the passion of “Until the Night” from 82nd Street nor summon the emotion of “I’ve Loved These Days” from Turnstiles.

“The Longest Time” could have been made by a myriad of ‘50s-’60s doo-wop groups. But the melody is dull and the lyrics fall just short of hackneyed. Likewise, “This Night” (a slowdown) sounds vocally and melodically like something ripped off from Little Anthony and the Imperials. “Tell Her About It” is another upbeat cut, is very accessible, with over commercial. This could account for the fact that its rapidly approaching airplay overkill. This song owes some popularity it has to its ‘70s Motown sound.

Side two has the same motley character as its predecessor. “Uptown Girl” is nothing short of embarrassing. It sounds like a badly pirated copy of a Frankie Valli and the Four Seasons song. Some of the lyrics must be quoted, to fully demonstrate their banality:

Uptown girl
You know I can’t afford to buy her pearls
But maybe someday when my ship comes in She’ll understand what kind of guy I’ve been
And then I’ll win

“Careless Talk,” another Sam and Dave type of song, has more of an interesting melody than some of the others. It’s actually enjoyable.

“Christie Lee,” sounds like a Jerry Lee Lewis copy, with its piano smashing and screaming. Once again a boring melody drowns potentially witty (if not meaningfull) lyrics.

“Leave a Tender Moment Alone” sounds like it was taken lock, stock and barrel from early Burt Bacharach especially the harmonica solo. If you liked “This Guy’s in Love With You” and “Raindrops Keep Fallin’ On My Head,” you’ll enjoy this pretty tune. But don’t look for definitive Joel here.

“Keeping the Faith,” the final cut, seems to be by way of Joel’s explanation as to why he made this album. The lyrics are descriptive of those “sweet romantic teenage nights...” he talked about in “Scenes from an Italian Restaurant.” After a colorful descrip-tion of the styles and fads which filled his youth, he says, “Now I’ve told you my reasons for the whole revivial. Now I’m going outside to have an ice cold beer in the shade...” With that, he formally puts himself on the back for hav-ing produced this album. But the accomplishment is a dubious one indeed, particularly in the shadow of all the hits that came before it, from Joel and from the artists he imitates.

In “Keeping the Faith,” Joel also says, “You can get just so much from a good thing. You can linger too long in your dreams.” There is something good to be found in this album. But it’s doubtful anything on it would find its way to an ultimate collection of Joel’s greatest hits.

If you want to get into ’50s-’60s revival, listen to the Stray Cats. Or, better yet, get some collections of the best of Motown, and Buddy Holly’s greatest hits, and listen to the people who made that kind of music great when it was new and progressive.

Robin Williams' Throbbing Python of Love is funny. Not hysterically funny, but funny. It's doubtful that anything on this album will cause you to bust the proverbial gut laughing, but the performance is consistently (if not abundantly) peppered with good one-liners.

Williams mostly leans on sex and drugs for material, specifically delving into the properties of booze, coke and puberty. He does a few brief celebrity parodies of such performers as Richard Simmons, Jack Nicholson and a 30-second "Elmer Fudd Sings Bruce Springsteen."

There's a predictable "spider and egg personified" bit, i.e. ovums that say "hello, sailor" to unrousing sperm, followed by a series of one-liners about sex and babies—"Look, a womb with a view...men spend nine months trying to get out of the womb, and the rest of their lives trying to get back in."

The Falkland Islands bit, the only piece that was vaguely political—kind of a shame because Williams has shown a real knack for political humor—turned out to be a play on words, with reporters calling it the "F—kin' Islands" and something about soldiers moving in with sheep. This was all worth a chuckle or two, but it seems like the topic could have been milked for whatever his was adl worth a chuckle or two, but it just another bit.

A piece about cats' and dogs' behavior was extremely reminiscent of some George Carlin material. It has definitely been done.

Overall, Throbbing Python of Love is checkered with sparks of the old Williams originality, but not nearly enough. Basically, it's just another comedy album.

Summertime When the Living Is Easy...

...Or maybe it isn't. You decide. While most of you were out earning money, hanging out at the beach, drinking and partying and generally making a nuisance of yourselves, the campus didn't go anywhere—and many people were still here, still doing things, and some of them were Student Association staff members. The Student Association staff members write about the other people. This is part of what they wrote:

SB Student Sentenced for Attempted Murder

June 16—Former Stony Brook student Richard Levy was given seven years in prison last week for the attempted murder of his love rival by means of a mailed bomb.

According to Monday, the verdict was passed by Judge John Vaughn only a day after the funeral of the defendant's father who had passed away the previous week at the funeral home. The judge said that Levy was present throughout most of the service, but was restrained in handcuffs and accompanied by police officers.

Levy was convicted on April 22 of conspiracy and attempted murder for mailing what he considered to be a bomb to a graduate student, Richard Aslant, who had been the current boyfriend of Jane Zysk, Levy's girlfriend from 1979 to 1982. Levy's apparent desperation over the break-up led him to ask another student to construct the device, but the student gave him a dummy instead and notified the police. Richard Aslant was arrested by detectives from the Suffolk County Police Department's 6th precinct on Nov. 15, 1982 while he got off a train at the Stony Brook Station after mailing the device from Hicksville.

Search Committee Formed For New VP of U Affairs

June 16—A search committee has been formed to find a replacement for James Black, vice-president for finance, who announced his intention to resign on May 13, effective at the end of July. Professor Ed Bergdalsky from the Medical School has been appointed by University President John Marburger to head the committee, which will seek an individual to fill the position as soon as possible, said Dr. fries, the acting vice-president will be named. Dr. Black, who stepped into the newly created vice-presidency three years ago, said it would be to be expected, however, in view of the recent New York State budget cuts. The areas that the vice-president for University Affairs oversees are: University News Service, Publications, Alumni Affairs, Conferences, and Special Events and Public Affairs. These offices were grouped together when the vice-presidency was created.

University Seeks Funds To Relieve Housing Crunch

Aug 15—The university wants to build a 436 space apartment complex on campus with private housing facilities. The development, according to John H. Marburger, university president, will cost $15 million. The state and the community have been able to relieve.

Providing the legal aspects of privately developing on public land have been ironed out with the state legislature, Mike Barrett, a student, said that the state and the community have been able to relieve.

Sex Bias Suit Against University Dismissed

Aug 15—A sex bias suit against the university that has been pending for several years was dismissed today by Circuit Court. Court Judge Courteous was asked to dismiss the suit by the university.

George C. Pratt said the suit lacked sufficient evidence of sexual discrimination.

The suit, brought by 32 former and current female faculty and staff workers at the university, claimed that the university was sex in hiring, promoting and providing equal benefits for women, said Joseph Garcia, a partner in the law firm representing the women. He said that they have 30 days from when the decision was made to decide on whether to appeal the judge's decision.

Pratt dismissed the case citing the university has no official policies that would work against the hiring and promotion of women. In his 97-page report, he cited the opposite of this as being true. He said that the administration at Stony Brook is committed to carrying out the legislation in the Civil Rights Act of 1964.

FSA Prez Resigns; Elections Moved Up

July 12—Richard Bentley, president of the Faculty Student Association (FSA) for the past three years, intends to leave his position this Fall and hopes to speed the date of FSA's annual elections so he may do so without resigning.

Bentley, 24, saw FSA through from a time when the operation lost money annually to its current status as a major moneymaker that invests in campus projects. He is leaving Stony Brook for a job at Downstate Medical Center in Brooklyn which he starts tomorrow. He will not handle his FSA responsibilities until the FSA Board of Directors can assemble and elect new officers.

The date of the elections, which are usually held in mid-Fall, will be moved up to as early as possible, preferably in the beginning of September, Bentley said.

U Police Change Training; Seek More Guns

July 13—The state-mandated training program in the use of firearms by Department of Public Safety officers is being "upgraded," said Gary Barnes, the department's director. Among the changes are the use of the FPII instead of New York State Troopers to train the officers in close-range运用, and the purchase of six new revolvers. Barnes also wishes to purchase 25 additional revolvers.

Six new revolvers were purchased to supplement the university's stock of firearms because there were not enough guns to train officers attending the 16-week state-mandated course in firearms training at the university's Police Academy, according to Barnes. The four Smith and Wesson revolvers the university owned since the days the officers were armed prior to 1965 were not enough for the 21-member class, Barnes said. But there was never a shortage in the close until now because state troopers, instructors at the academy since 1965, leaned each officer a pistol as they were needed. According to Barnes, the guns were not adequate, though. "They were borrowed from a warehouse and they were old and used. They broke down on us and misled," he said. "We will also most likely have to scrap the old and probably purchase more for training purposes. We need about.

Three Village Residents Want South Entrance Closed

Aug 12—In response to residential complaints, the Three Village Civic Association has proposed the closing of the university's entrance on Stony Brook Road. The association has recommended closing the South Drive entrance during peak hours, from 8:00-10:00 AM and from 3:00-6:30 PM. Officials at the university said that such a closing is a terrible idea and would create further traffic problems through side streets and on Nichols Road.

Sheriff Hoffman, president of Three Village Civic Association task force that recommended closing the entrance, related the proposal for the entrance closing to the problems the neighborhood has faced in the 20 years the university has been open.

According to Hoffman, Stony Brook Road is old and poorly built, and not constructed for the heavy amount of traffic it is receiving. The speed and volume of this traffic, as well as the danger posed to children and pedestrians has prompted great concern, he said. The community and the association are recommending the use of Nichols Road as an alternate route, a detour of 5/10 of a mile.

Three Village Task Force To Complete Report

Aug. 25—The final report by Governor Mario Cuomo's Three Village Task Force, headed by University President John Marburger, should be complete by the end of September.

"I think we're shooting for the end of September for it to be complete and then it will go to the governor," said Patricia Roth, special assistant to Marburger on the Shornem issue.

The report is expected to make suggestions to Cuomo regarding safety and evacuation questions and the economic impact the plant will have, whether opened or closed permanently, on Long Island.

Marburger, who was chosen in June to head the 13-member task force by Cuomo, has been meeting regularly with the group over the summer and attending various public hearings. One such hearing is scheduled for tomorrow at 3 PM at the Suffolk County Center in Riverhead. A task force meeting is set for Wednesday.

Marburger was chosen because of his background in physics and because of his prior experience in committees stemming from the Suffolk County Executive's office. Other members of the task force include: David Axelrod, the State Health Commissioner; Court Judge Courteous; and Albert Kahn, head of the Suffolk County Consumer Protection Board; Marge Harrison, an official of the Long Island Public Authority; Albert Kanter, insurance; Public Services Commission Chairman, Paul Marka, the president of the Memorial Sloan Kettering Cancer Center and Hugh Wilson of Adelphi University.

War Veteran to Be Writer in Residence

By Elizabeth Wasserman

Aug 19—University students and community residents will find a unique opportunity to expand their political education this fall. Vietnam veteran, political activist, and author Ron Kovic will be on campus as the university's first writer in residence for the academic year.

The 87-year-old Kovic is author of "Born on the Fourth of July," an account of the war in Vietnam that left him in a wheelchair but far from immobile. The book details his experience in the Marines until his spinal cord was shattered by a bullet. He will spend the next year talking to students, lecturing, and wrapping up a three-volume work on contemporary American history.

Prize-Winning Author Joins SB Faculty

July 13—Appointment of Lewis Thomas, described as "quite possibly the best essayist on science now working anywhere in the world," as a university professor at Stony Brook was announced recently by University President John Marburger.

Thomas, a doctor and an administrator, a biologist, a researcher and a professor, a published poet and, quite possibly, the best essayist on science now working anywhere in the world.

We at Casio figured you could use a little help this semester (not to mention a few extra bucks). So we’re offering a $5 rebate on our FX-98 and FX-910 solar powered scientific calculators, which regularly sell for $29.95.

The FX-910 is a wallet sized unit with 48 scientific functions. The FX-98 is credit card size with 42 scientific functions. Both feature an 8 digit mantissa with 2 digit exponent.

Both feature fractional calculations (a function not found on many comparable units). So now you can work with fractions without having to convert to decimals.

And since both units incorporate a powerful solar cell that can operate in very low light, they’ll not only save you time and energy, they’ll save you from ever having to buy batteries.

The FX-98 and FX-910 also come with a free application manual, “Strategies for Scientific Calculating,” which will save you work by showing you shortcuts for using your calculator.

So if you think you could use a little student aid this semester, take advantage of our $5 rebate offer. And bring a Casio to class.

Redskins Are Ready

Orchard Park, N.Y. — Washington Redskins tight end Rick Walker thought both teams were looking ahead to their season openers. But obviously the Redskins, who dominated Saturday night's National Football League preseason game against the Buffalo Bills to a greater extent than the 27-19 score indicated, weren't gazing that far into the crystal ball. The defending Super Bowl champions rebounded from a poor performance in a 39-7 drubbing at the hands of the Miami Dolphins the week before, while the Bills, who earned an inspiring last-second win against the Detroit Lions in their previous preseason game, came back down to earth with a thud. "Buffalo played a pretty vanilla defense," said Walker. "The only thing on their mind was Miami and the only thing on ours was Dallas; it will be a big game for us, opening on T.V. in front of a national audience." Walker's statement makes sense. Both teams open against intra-divisional rivals who will be among the teams to beat in their respective conferences. The Dolphins visit Buffalo Sunday and the Redskins take on the Cowboys Monday night. "Last week we were just flat out flat," said Washington quarterback Joe Theismann, who completed 11 of 185 yards and a touchdown. "When you play with a little emotion, you make things happen." Emotion seemed to be absent from the Bills, but first-year coach Joe Stephenson said he wasn't "disappointed in this football team. "We had some good things and an awful lot of bad things," he added. "I think we're going to be a good football team." Both Stephenson and Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs were concerned about injuries to their players, however. For Buffalo, starting receivers Robert Gibbs and Ryan Manley sprained ankles. But he wasn't concerned about his 166th victory over the Miami Dolphins the week before, while the Bills, who earned an 8-3 winner over the New York Giants Monday night, were just flat out flat. "It was a good come-back after Miami lowered the boom," said Theismann. "Miami whipped us," he said. "It exposed us. Unless we play with great emotion, a good team can do that to us." Both coaches also liked what they saw in their reserve quarterbacks. The Redskins' Holley only threw for one more yard than Theismann but he led the team on several sustained drives, including an 80-yard march that ended in a touchdown pass to wide receiver Steve Smith. Matt Keffler, hit on 11 of 18 passes, including a beautiful 31-yard touchdown pass to Byron Franklin. "Matt Keffler came out tonight and certainly gained some confidence in himself and his teammates gained some confidence in him," said the former Bills quarterback after the game.

Braves Beat Pirates

Pittsburgh — Pete Falcone and Terry Forster combined on a six-hitter and Bob Watson drilled a game-winning home run as the Atlanta Braves edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1 yesterday in a battle of National League division leaders.

The victory enabled the Braves to maintain their half-game NL West lead over Los Angeles, an 8-3 winner over Philadelphia. The Pirates stayed a game in front of the Phillies in the NL East.

The Braves, losers of the first two games of the three-game series, took a 1-0 lead in the third against losing John Candelaria, 12-8. Bruce Benedict led off with a double before Glenn Hubbard followed two out later with an RBI double. Hubbard had just nine hits in his previous 69 at-bats, a .13 average.

Evans Drives Giants

New York — Darrell Evans drove in three runs, including two with his 27th homer of the season, to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 7-2 victory over the New York Mets yesterday. Bob Helmer, a former Bruin who worked his longest stint in 60 games this season with 4-2 innings, boosted his record to 4-1-2. Barry, who relieved starter Andy McGaffigan in the second inning, allowed one run on two hits. Gary Lavelle pitched three scoreless innings of relief to earn his 16th save.
Big Red Machine Ready to Roll

By Michael Berg

The Stony Brook Patriots, who will launch their first ever Division III schedule on Sept. 18 when they lock horns with SUNY/ Maritime at home. The Maritime game will be the first of six home games this season.

Much has been promised this year, both from the university and the team. Robert Francis, vice president for Campus Operations, is overseeing the proposed construction of bleachers and a press box. A four-foot chain-link fence has already been installed around the field during the summer to deter vandalism. The university is planning to repair the playing surface of the field, which has suffered from years of neglect. There are plans to expand the locker room facilities to accommodate both the home team and the visitors. The total cost for this work, according to sources within the university, is in the neighborhood of $150,000.00. This is not an overnight job; it may be a few years before all work is completed. The projected date of completion is "opening day," 1984. The Alumni Association has donated a scoreboard along with a public address system to the university. Veteran head coach Fred Kemp is as excited about his team's expected performance this season as he is about the new facilities.

Kemp, who is starting his tenth season at the helm with a record of 45-28-2, said that his team will play better than 300 football this season. The real test will occur next season when the Patriots are scheduled to play some of the tougher, longer established Division III teams whose schedules are usually completed several years in advance. Kemp, who is anxious to establish the Patriots as a legitimate Long Island football power, has agreed to a four-year, four-game home-and-home series with Hofstra University beginning next season.

This season's schedule pits the Patriots against three teams which they have never faced. They are: Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI), Trenton State College and SUNY at Brockport—all three of which are Division III opponents. Of the remaining six teams, the Patriots have posted winning season records with five of them. The only team which Stony Brook hasn't posted a winning record against is Ramapo (N.J.) College which has a record of 2-2 against the Patriots.

Two new assistant coaches have been appointed to the coaching staff during the summer. Appointed line coaches were Jack Polo, former defensive coordinator at New York Tech and former head coach at Commack South High School, who will be coaching the offensive line, and Marty Hector, former president of the Suffolk County Football Coaches Association and head coach at Patchogue-Medford High School. Returning to Coach Kemp's staff are Ed Urban, defensive coordinator, Mary Weiss, offensive coordinator and Tom Black, receiver coach.

Last year's "Big Red Machine" has entered the "big leagues." With players like 1982 MVP and All-American candidate quarterback Ray McKenna, fleet-footed half-back Jorge Taylor, defensive end Mike Infracone and other returning players who helped take the Stony Brook Patriots to within 60 minutes of a championship game.

Women's Soccer Team Names Head Coach

By Silvana Daral

Stony Brook's women's varsity soccer team has recently been appointed their first coach, Derek Hiltunen, who started the women's soccer programs at Eastern Illinois University and at Canada's Brock University, has been appointed to a full-time position with the academic rank of lecturer. In addition to coaching Stony Brook's first women's soccer team, he will serve as assistant to the men's and women's athletic directors and conduct physical education classes.

Last spring Stony Brook announced that soccer would become the ninth varsity sport for women, competing in Division III of the National Collegiate Athletic Association. In addition, two men's sports were chosen for elevation to Division III status. Lacrosse was chosen last spring and football will begin this fall. There are now 11 men's varsity teams.

At Brock University, Hiltunen served as director of intramurals and taught soccer as well as squash and badminton to undergraduate students. His women's varsity soccer team won one tournament and earned semi-final and final berths in two others. He also served as assistant coach of his men's soccer team.

In 1980, he earned his bachelor's degree at Brock University in Physical Education and his master's in Sports and Business Administration at Eastern Illinois in 1983.

Sandra Woden, director of women's athletics, said, "We welcome Derek Hiltunen to Stony Brook. His education and experience very prepared him for this special challenge. We have every confidence he will develop a successful women's soccer program which will help to improve the administration of our growing athletics program."

The soccer season will play nine games this season, including four home games. Opening day is Sept. 15 when they will play against Union College. Their first home game will be Sept. 17 against Southampton at 1 PM.
