Sec'y Bell: Education Outlook Sunny for 1985

White House Officials Address a Student Audience on Education and Foreign Policy Issues

By Elizabeth Wasserman
Washington, D.C. - U.S. Education Secretary Terrel Bell Monday forecasted a sunny outlook for the American education system in 1985, announcing that Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores for graduating high school students should rise as the amount of federal dollars spent on education.

"The word that I'm getting is that the [SAT] scores will be up," Bell said of the rise "not dramatically, but maybe statistically significant," as Bell said. The SAT math and verbal scores have been on a downward trend in recent years, and Bell said this year will show the first reversal of that trend.

"We believe the real jump will likely come with the class of 1985 because that will be the time when the reforms that have been enacted to improve our schools have been implemented," said Bell at a briefing of college news media editors at the White House Monday.

Bell, an appointee of President Ronald Reagan, said that he expects the budget for 1985 to be the biggest ever. He said, "I anticipate that we'll probably have the highest appropriations ever in our history." The amount the Reagan administration is proposing to spend on education in a budget submitted to Congress is $18 billion, Bell said. He said the level for this past year was around $8 billion.

But, as often happens, the budget that Reagan submits may not look at all like the budget that Congress passes.

In 1982, the Reagan administration proposed cutting federal aid to students pursuing a college education by 30 percent and in 1983 that proposal but jumped to 50 percent, according to the College Press Service. In both years, Congress passed smaller decreases.

Although Bell is hoping that the amount of federal money spent on education in 1985 is the largest in history, he did not specify in what areas increases would be made. The education budget funds primary and secondary education institutions as well as universities and colleges. Spokesmen for the Education Department were unavailable for comment on the specific increases at this time.

Reagan's opponent in the upcoming Presidential election, former Vice President Walter Mondale, is proposing to increase Reagan's $18 billion by another $12 billion, totaling $30 billion, if elected, according to Baneel Ratan, the student press coordinator for the Mondale-Ferraro campaign. Ratan said a large portion of the $30 billion would be spent on expanding research in universities and colleges. He charged that the Reagan administration had diverted a lot of research dollars to the defense research sector since taking office.

Ratan said that although Mondale believes there must be cuts made in the federal budget to reduce the federal deficit significantly, Mondale would spare the education budget from cuts. Larry Speakes, Reagan's deputy press secretary, at Monday's briefing, did not list when asked what measures, if any, Reagan intends to take to lower the federal deficit if re-elected.

More than 180 college media editors from around the country attended the extended White House briefing that was organized by the White House Office of Media Relations. The briefing, what organizers called the first of its kind, was called to allow the college press access to high ranking government officials, according to Jack Weber, deputy director of Special Projects for the Office of Media Relations. He said they had felt the college media had been neglected in the past.

Among the officials that addressed the college editors was United Nations Ambassador Jean Kirkpatrick, who said that Reagan had brought the country into a period of "recovery." The recovery has been described as both as far as the national economy and national security, she said. Kirkpatrick said she sees one of (continued on page 3)
Detroit—United Auto Workers President Owen Bieber said yesterday he had given General Motors Corp. a revised wage and job security proposal that "hopefully could conclude these negotiations" without a national strike.

Bieber held a press conference hours after GM laid off workers at six more parts plants, the result of 13 more strikes by the UAW on local issues. The strikes began at midnight Friday by 62,000 of the union's 350,000 GM workers.

As of yesterday more than 8,000 non-striking GM workers at 11 plants had been laid off.

A GM spokesman said the company had no immediate comment.

GM said that it was losing the production of 8,000 cars and 1,600 trucks per day. The company would not put a price tag on the, but Wall Street analysts estimated the losses at $27 million per day.

The latest layoffs were announced by GM's Harrison Radiator division -670 of its 5,700 employees at Lockport will be let go and possibly 80 more on Thursday at a plant in Buffalo.

New layoffs also were announced at the Detroit-Hamtramck division engine plant in Detroit, 600; Chevrolet parts in Saginaw, Mich., 800; AG Spark Plug in Flint, Mich., 220; a GM metal fabricating plant in Mansfield, Ohio, 106; Fisher body in Grand Blanc, Mich., 70; and Fisher body in Kalamazoo, Mich., 20.

Mondale-Ferraro Team Out Looking For Votes

Campaigning on opposite coasts, Walter F. Mondale and Geraldine Ferraro took aim yesterday at the Reagan administration's record on arms control. "The fate of the earth is at stake," said Ferraro as she launched her campaign for the White House.

"We need a president pledged to preventing a nuclear war," said Mondale. Mondale renewed his pledge to declare a moratorium on the testing of nuclear weapons and the testing and deployment of all space weapons and to contact Soviet leaders on his first day in office to request a summit to negotiate a "mutual, verifiable nuclear freeze."

Both Mondale and Ms. Ferraro have criticized Reagan for failing to meet with his Soviet counterpart. Reagan is scheduled to meet next week with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The Long Island Lighting Co., the subsidiary of AECA, said. Efren Recalde, head of the plant should be denied. A commission recommended that recommendation.

Lilco Goesto Washington To Seek NRC Approval

Washington—Attorneys for Suffolk County and New York State plan to tell the Nuclear Regulatory Commission Friday why a low-power operating license for the Shoreham nuclear power plant should be denied. A commission hearing is planned Sept. 9 by the NRC's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board.

County and state attorneys have blocked the license by arguing that Shoreham lacks the approved emergency power sources needed to shut the plant down in the event of an emergency.

NRC staff also oppose fuel loading and tests of Shoreham's reactor at even extremely low power levels, in part because the license panel did not address security issues in its ruling.

Pope Skips Territories

Fort Simpson, Northwest Territories—Pope John Paul II's plane circled overhead and anxious Indians and Eskimos who wanted to bring the "Man of Peace" to their northern Canadian outpost Tuesday. Instead, the pontiff to skip his visit to this northern Canadian native's home. Indian leaders said, to deliver a message of support for Canadian natives in their struggle for self-government and economic progress.

The fog "increased my desire to be in your midst to pray with you," the pontiff said in a message he taped in nearby Yellowknife for broadcast to the natives if foul weather on Wednesday again prevents his visit to Fort Simpson.

Today's Forecast

According to the National Weather Service, the weather for today will be mostly sunny, with a few clouds from time to time. Temperatures range 70-75.

On the sound and south shore coastal waters, winds will be variable with 10 knots or less, waves at 1 foot heights. The water temperature is expected to be 71 degrees. Tropical storm Gustav, located 75 miles northeast of Bermuda, has winds up to 30 MPH. The storm is expected to draw northeasterly today, posing no threat to the coastal U.S.

The outlook for tomorrow, sunny skies blowing with some cloudiness, with highs in the mid 70's.

48 Killed, 50 Hurt as Ecuadorian Plane Crashes After Take Off

Quito, Ecuador—A DC-8 cargo jetliner struck a perimeter fence while taking off from the Quito airport yesterday and smashed into nearby houses, killing at least 48 people and injuring more than 50. local news reports said.

The government did not release any casualty figures.

Red Cross officials said many of those injured in about a dozen homes hit by the plane suffered burns as the crash made "a terrible noise." At least 30 people died, including the four crew members of the plane operated by the Ecuadorian Airways, which were approved Sept. 5 by the NRC's Atomic Safety and Licensing Board.

Town Board Heirs Views on Closing Entrance

The Brookhaven Town Board yesterday heard opposing views from residents of several Stony Brook road entrances, which they felt was a danger to the university. The board voted to keep the entrances open.

The town met at the New Village Recreation Center last night, with about 150 residents from the Stony Brook area attending. The meeting was called by the town to discuss the university's plan to close the south drive entrance to the university, which would affect residents of the area.

The meeting was characterized by heated debate, with residents expressing concerns about the safety and方便ity of the entrances for students and community members.

The meeting was attended by representatives from the university, who defended their decision to close the entrance. They cited safety concerns as the primary reason for closing the entrance, and stated that the university had received numerous complaints from residents.

The residents of the area expressed concern about the university's decision, and argued that the entrances were a necessary part of the community's infrastructure. They cited the convenience of the entrances for students and visitors, and argued that the entrances were a symbol of the university's commitment to the community.

The meeting ended with a vote to keep the entrances open. The residents expressed relief and gratitude to the board for hearing their concerns, and promised to continue working with the university to ensure the safety and convenience of the community.

boost his appeal to college students. Despite the organizer's arguments to the contrary, many skeptics remained. Said Calvert: "I emphatically disagree that the conference was not a ploy to get at the student vote. If you believe that, I've got some lunch meat to sell you."

The Reagan-Bush campaign is taking strives to reach the college audience, such as purchasing advertising space in college newspapers across the country, according to organizers.

But, equivalent measures are also being taken by the coordinators of the campaign for the election of Reagan's chief opponent, former Vice President Walter Mondale. Mondale campaign workers have scheduled a "Student Leadership Conference" for this Saturday at New York University. Mondale's 26-year-old son, Ted, will be addressing those who attend. One person the student journalists at the White House press briefing Monday had hoped would make an appearance, as their invitations had speculated, was the President himself. Speakes said, though, that Reagan had a schedule filled with senior staff meetings and cocktails with selected members of the media and therefore, he could not attend. Reagan's no-show disappointed Ken Sommers, editor of The Candler at Illinois Benedictine College outside of Chicago, who flew in Sunday night at the hopes of seeing the President at the conference. "We've been waiting on Ronald Reagan," said Sommers, a 20-year-old student at the Catholic college that has an enrollment of 2,000 students.

Media access to Reagan is a hard thing to buy in Washington these days, though. Since Sept. 2, Reagan has been accessible to the White House press corps for a total of 40 minutes—including each time correspondents have shouted questions to the President as he has been darting to a helicopter on the White House lawn. Speakes said.

"You know the President said he'd come out here and see us more often and hold a news conference maybe, but there was a little disappointment with the program. I felt some of the answers were a little evasive."

College Press Hears Policies

Reagan's greatest accomplishments during his three and a half years in office have been the installation of Cruise and Pershing II missiles in Western Europe. She described the installation of those missiles as the "major single strategic event in the last three years."

However, members of the Mondale campaign believe that Reagan has succeeded in "destabilizing" the security of the United States. Ratan said that one "destabilizing" factor was Reagan's relationship with the Soviet Union—"or lack of one. He pointed out that Reagan was the first President since Herbert Hoover who has not met with his counterpart in the Soviet Union. If elected, Mondale would try to meet with the Soviet leader at least once a year, Ratan said.

Kirkpatrick was asked many questions about the United States involvement in Central America. One college journalist asked how the Reagan administration would treat non-democratic governments in the region in future years, if the President is re-elected. "We can't be the world's policeman and there are so many in the region," she replied. "I expect that after the re-election of President Reagan we will continue our support of the democratic forces in Central America."

Let's Face It:

By Robby Schwach and Tim Malhotra

Question: Who do you think will win the upcoming presidential election? Why?

Amy Pargament (sophomore) - Joe Nankok (sophomore) and Nino Jiminez (senior) - Reagan will win because he has kept the unemployment and inflation rates down. His economic policies are fairly good.

Greg Forogulo - Unfortunately Ronald Reagan will win because too many people are ignorant enough to vote for him and there is no viable alternative.

Eugene Hoby - John Marburger will win. He's a pretty nice guy. He invited me to dinner. Really, I think Reagan will win because Mondale and Ferraro haven't any concrete plans.

Thomas Ng (transfer junior) - Ronald Reagan will win. There are too many powerful rich people voting for him.

Terry Chapman (sophomore) - Reagan has the presidency in the bag. This is due to his incumbancy and the fact that Mondale messed up by making too many promises that he can't carry out. He also made a mistake by choosing Ferraro (because of her husband's shady business dealings.)

Mike Kassel - Reagan is going to win. A lot of people have confidence in his record.

Erie Moore (freshman) - I think Reagan is going to win. A lot of rich people like him. Also inflation hasn't risen that much and the economy is doing well. Personally, I don't like him.

Do administrators really listen when students speak out to correct what they feel is a serious violation? The actions of the Office of Residence Life are an example. Is not one of the principles of democracy that one is innocent until proven guilty?

The five undergraduates claim they have been told to move to separate locations by Friday because of their past record and because they made too much noise during a party they held last Thursday. Officials from Residence Life, meanwhile, have declined to comment on the situation.

If what the five students have said is accurate, there is a serious injustice being committed. They claim they are being pronounced guilty of a crime (making too much noise) and being punished (by being forced to move to separate locations) before having a fair trial (a hearing before the Student Judiciary). Is not one of the principles of democracy that one is innocent until proven guilty? Don't we all have a right to due process by the action. As of this writing, Residence Life, whether or not the students are right to due process by the action, and members of the building have begun circulating petitions, one claiming the noise is a serious injustice being committed. They claim they are being pronounced guilty of a crime while, have declined to comment on the situation.

CONCERTS

Ramonies: Weekend Washout

by Nancy Tamasiatis

Due to the dreary, rainy weather conditions, the Ramones' concert was moved from the outdoor Fall Fest location to inside the gymnasium.

This didn't exactly excite the audience Saturday night. In typical fashion, the opening act, "Dino and the Detonators" was booed and given many gestures involving the middle finger by many in the crowd. The lead singer Dino, reciprocated this gesture exclaiming, "Give me a break. I've got a dirty job!"

Audience reaction aside, Dino is nonetheless a visually flamboyant entertainer. His high energy stage antics make him interesting to watch. His tough man, high strut swagger,however, seemed somewhat unbenefiting to his Dudley Moore-ish physique. Their set, which opened with "Secret Agent Man," highlighted the pyrotechnical virtuosity of their guitarist although the basic musicianship was strong more attention should be paid to acquiring better material. Their originals lacked personality plus memorability.

After a 30 minute intermission, the Ramones appearance was greeted very enthusiastically by the audience, who were psyched to be completely won over.

As usual, the band members were attired in basic black leather. It was quickly seen that lead vocalist Joey Ramone, with his pasty white complexion and complete lack of charisma, is unique: the most motion he engaged in was an occasional limp attempt at twirling his microphone stand. His success as a punk star would seem to be the genre's ultimate crowning accomplishment.

When the band played their theme song for the 1980's, 'I Wanna be Sedated' it seemed like that would be the proper state of mind for enduring this performance.

As is with some bands, the Ramones seem to fare significantly better on record. With skilled production and arrangements, however, the audience found some of their material, like "Rock & Roll Radio," quite entertaining.

At the start, many people were be-hopping all over the gym. By the end of the show, however, mainly just hardcore slam dancers were left. It seemed that the Ramones' tri-chordal, no-thematic approach to music quickly ran thin. Their songs droned endlessly onto the next without scope or definition, and all lyrics were utterly indecipherable. Although the complimentary admission price was right, — free — little of an audience was left for the band's closing chords.

STAGE

by Dennis Britten

"I'm gonna sit right down and write myself a letter and make believe it came from you..."

I'm serious. This column was originally conceived to help solve the woeful lack of communication among students as to what is taking place theatrically on and around campus. It was established as a central source of such information not only for theatre arts students but for everyone here at Stony Brook.

But information has to come in before it can go out! A lonely box sits day after day after day in the Theatre Arts Dept. mail room, waiting for someone to feed it some information. But, for the most part, it is starving, dying of neglect by those who could take advantage of it, without charge, to inform us all. Won't you use it? It is easier than hanging a poster and details regarding your event will be seen by everyone who reads this column. Please, don't assume the information is known; that's why a lot of students here feel left out. Take time to communicate.

CUES: The opening night of the Fine Arts Center Music Series is scheduled for this Saturday. Sept. 22 at 8 PM on the Main Stage. The Guarneri String Quartet will perform works of Hayden, Bartok and Brahms and will feature Lydia Artymiw on piano. Tickets are $11, $13, & $15.

Some exciting news...

Next semester the Theatre Arts Department will present Antigone of Sophocles and The Three Penny Opera of Bertolt Brecht and Kurt Weill. They are planning to hold auditions this semester and soon. I'll have the dates as soon as they are released.

Stony Brook Concerts presents Lou Reed in Concert Friday, Sept. 21. If you'd like to stripe out on your own to see a little Broadway, Three Village Trips is providing the university community with a $7 round trip to New York City on the Long Island Railroad. The trips run every Wednesday and Saturday. There are also four additional trips during the semester. Thurs. 9/27, Mon. 10/8, Mon. 11/12 and Sun. 12/16. For more information and reservations, call Nancy Walker at 751-7066.

REMEMBER: If you have information for Stage Cues leave details in Room 3051 of the Fine Arts Center before Monday the week of publication.

Have an entertaining week!

A Childish 'Woman in Red'

by Ellen Breidner

The infamous middle age crisis. There have been films, books, articles, television shows, and ultimately more films on this subject. Unfortunately for The Woman In Red, the plot of older men yearning for young, beautiful girls is just plumb tuckered out.

Gene Wilder plays an advertising executive who spots a beautiful model — played by real-life model Kelly LeBrock in her film debut — walking over a subway grate. As the wind from the grate blows her red silk dress up à la Marilyn Monroe, it’s revealed that she’s also wearing red silk underwear. Red silk at 9:30 in the morning? The only excuse for this is the fact that the film takes place in San Francisco.

Wilder, who directed and wrote the screenplay as well, is of course smitten by this sexpot. As expected, throughout the film he’ll be ready to give up everything he has in order to bed this luscious female. That includes friends, family, his car, house and career. He even makes a fool out of himself horseback-riding in order to get closer to her: she’s an ace horsewoman in addition to her perfect looks and her English accent.

The movie’s dialogue is sophomoric and its attempts at one-liners are childish and boring. The pratfalls and plunders of the main character are predictable. All of the characters are adults who act as though they were five, maybe six, years old. The movie does have two things going for it. Their names are Judith Ivey and Gilda Radner.

Gilda Radner plays the one refreshing character in the entire movie. Her character mistakenly interprets Wilder’s advances for the model as advances towards herself. She gets back at him for ‘standing her up’ by virtually destroying his car. Judith Ivey plays Wilder’s wife. In the movie’s only funny scene, she almost shoots him in the genitals with a loaded gun.

Although this movie is rated PG-13 one cannot understand why. There is no cursing and practically no nudity; in other words, no fun. The Woman In Red is one hour and fifteen minutes too long. which makes this movie one hour and fifteen minutes too long — and it made the audience wish for a carton of No-Dooz.

Welcome to my Nightmare...

by L.B. Radin

The Dreamscape — that part of the mind where dreams occur: the unmapped territory of the subconscious. It is this world that Alex Gardner must master in order to stop a psychophysical assassination.

Alex Gardner is a young man with powerful psychic abilities. He was carefully tested and monitored for months, until his impatience caused him to leave the experimentation site without telling a soul.

Now, a year and a half later, Alex is brought to Thornhill College: a place of secret experimentation. There he meets Dr. Jane Davises and is reunited with his old doctor, Paul Novotny. They introduce him to the Dreamscape, a place in someone else’s dream to which he can transport himself.

The Dreamscape is used to help patients with various sleeping disorders, such as the nightmares of little Buddy Brismen. One psychic had already been ‘lost’ to Buddy’s terryfying dreams: it took Alex to help the child conquer the monster inside of him.

Trouble comes in the personages of Tommy Glatman, a sadistic psychic who murdered his father, and Bob Blair, the man who runs the experiments and teaches Tommy how to kill with his mind. You see, it a sleeper is murdered in his dream, his body will go through the physical reactions of the murder: thus the person actually dies. This becomes useful when the President of the United States, a ‘friend’ of Blair’s, comes to Blair to be cured of his nuclear war nightmares. What follows is an all-out dream war between Alex and Tommy, with the life of the sedated president hanging in the balance.

Bruce Cohn Curtis produced this fascinatingly could-be-real fantasy, which was directed by Joseph Ruben. Peter Curan developed the visual effects, which were lightly understated instead of specturally unbelievable.

The main character was played by Dennis Quaid. Quaid makes an adorable scoundrel of a psychic: no one can blame him for having more fun with horse races and young women than with flashcards and old men.

Max von Sydow portrays the sinister Bob Blair very well, evoking both dislike and respect from his audience. Jane was played by Kate Capshaw, who seems to merit a larger role than that given to her in this movie. Also giving excellent performances were Christopher Plummer, David Patrick Kelly, and Eddie Albert.

Dreamscape is the story of an adventure into the mind. One day, perhaps sooner than you think, that adventure could be real...
And Now a Word
From Our Sponsor...

This week's trivia contest is about television. You know, that square thing with the antenna coming out of the top...no, no, not your Aunt Sandy. Anyhow, the trick here is given a popular phrase from a TV show, to identify the show and the name of the character or actor that said it.

Sound intriguing? This week's prize, for the entry with the most correct answers, is a picture of Sylvester Stallone, the 1984 "Daily Planet Almanac," and two nice, green $5 bills.

Answers must be submitted to Statesman, Stony Brook Union Room 075 by 3:30 PM on Monday, Sept. 24. All entries must include your name and telephone number. Only one entry per person. Ties will be broken by random drawing.

1. "One more time, Alice... Bang! Zoom!"
2. "Wilma!!"
3. "And hey, hey! Let's be careful out there!"
4. "It was only...logical, captain."
5. "Babaloo!!"
6. "You basically wabbit!"
8. "Ayyyyy!"
9. "What you talking 'bout, Willis?"
10. "A Mr. Richard Feder, from Fort Lee, New Jersey writes..."
11. "M-I-C..."
12. "Welcome to another dimension."
13. "Gee, Wally..."
14. "Wilma!!"
15. "Nanoo-Nanoo"
16. "Well, gosh, Darla..."
17. "Here's Johnny!"
18. "I'm a little bit country, and I'm a little bit rock 'n' roll..."
19. "Da plane, da plane!"
20. "It's a beautiful day in my neighborhood."

"Yours for a Song"

Contest Results

The response to last week's trivia contest, asking readers to identify songs from their first lyrics, was staggering! Maybe the questions were a little on the easy side, or maybe people needed the $10 for laundry bills, but whatever the reason, the entries poured in.

Several judging decisions cropped up, especially surrounding song #13, which very few people seemed to know the correct name of. After long hours of soul searching, I finally decided that "Uncle Albert" and "Admiral Halsey" were both acceptable, as well as the correct answer "Uncle Albert/Admiral Halsey", but that "Heads Across the Water," "Hands Across the Water" and "Admiral Paulie" just didn't make the grade.

That left no fewer than 19 totally correct entries. The winner, by random draw, was David Weisman, who will receive a used soundtrack of Gandhi as well as his ten dollar bill. Honorable mention goes to (deep breath): Joe Risley, Elton Park, Bruce Segal, Robin Fitzpatrick, Robert Frey, Sheryl Honigbaum, James Gilligan, Victoria DeSimone, Fred Froebrich, John Barnett, Bruce Randazzo, Jackie Johnson, Robert Landoman, Debbie Fein, Louis Valenti, Paul Contino, Eleanor Yee, and the Friends of Hand 221 (Whew). Thanks to all who entered.

The answers most often missed? #3, #15, and #16.

And thanks to Debbie Fein, for pointing out that the correct opening words of "Maxwell's Silver Hammer" are "Joan is quizzical..." (everyone managed to get it right, despite the error) and thanks to the many people who noted that Elton John and Liza Minnelli were valid solutions to #5 and #7, respectively.

Here are the answers:
1. "They told him don't you ever come around here..." — By Michael Jackson
2. "Maxwell Edison, majoring in medicine..." — Maxwell's Silver Hammer, by The Beatles
3. "Does she walk? Does she talk? Does she come complete?" — Centerfold, by the J. Geils Band
4. "Don't go changing, to try and please me, you never let me down before..." — Just the Way You Are, by Billy Joel
5. "Ever since I was a young boy, I played the silber ball..." — Pinball Wizard, by The Who or Elton John
6. "I close my eyes, only for a moment and the moment's gone..." — Dust in the Wind, by Kansas
7. "Start Spreading the News..." — New York, New York, by Frank Sinatra or Liza Minnelli
8. "Remember every little thing, as if it happened only yesterday..." — Paradise by the Dashboard Light, by Meat Loaf
9. "Who can it be knocking at my door?" — Who can it be now, by Men At Work
10. "There's a little black spot on the sun today..." — King of Pain, by The Police
11. "I've paid my dues, time after time..." — We are the Champions, by Queen
12. "There's a stain on my notebook where your coffee cup was..." — Black Coffee in Bed, by Squeeze
13. "We're so sorry, Uncle Albert..." — Uncle Albert/Admiral Halsey, by Paul McCartney and the Wings
14. "A long, long time ago, well I can still remember how that music used to make me smile..." — American Pie, by Don McLean
16. "Oh, look at all the lonely people..." — Eleanor Rigby, by The Beatles
17. "On a dark desert highway, cool wind in my hair..." — Hotel California, by The Eagles
18. "Just take those old records off the shelf..." — Old Time Rock and Roll, by Bob Seger
19. "Hello darkness my old friend, I've come to talk with you again..." — Sounds of Silence, by Simon and Garfunkel
20. "Well, the East Coast girls are hip..." — California Girls, by the Beach Boys
Rising out of the Dregs

Morse has pared down the sound he developed during his years with the Dregs, and now leads one of the most talented trios anywhere. With help from ex-Dregs drummer Rod Morgenstein, and bassist Jerry Peek (who Morse accurately describes as "the South's West new talent" on the liner notes), Morse has given us an album of incredible guitar playing over widely varying musical frameworks.

The Introduction begins with a flurry. "Cruise Missile," the first cut, is a head-long rush of blistering guitar leads, percolating bass riffs, and ultra-tight ensemble playing. Peek’s playing is most impressive on this track, tracking Morse’s supersonic leads note-for-note an octave lower. Veteran guest picker Albert Lee trades some tasty licks with Morse on the country blues-flavored "General Lee," which has an outside chance at being the theme to a Chinese movie.

"Up the Brook" opens up the classic Dregs sound, but the results are inconclusive. The music is ambitious, but alas, meandering, as can be seen in the three-part suite, "Huron River Blues," which ends the album. The album as a whole is a successful outing, however, tied together and working through Morse's amazing guitar work, which sears the vinyl from start to finish.

It is a wonderful thing to hear a virtuoso like Steve Morse front his own band, playing free of his previous encumbrments. The Introduction serves as a fine addition to the Dregs catalogue, as well as a perfect primer for those unfamiliar to Morse’s previous work. For the guitar-starved, it’s just what the doctor ordered.

Individually the Key As Year Begins

By Troy Silverman

Being that this is the beginning of the school year, it is very important that we talk.

Most freshmen are living on their own for the first time. This is an important time for one’s own "expressive individuality" to find a comfortable place in the campus environment, and most importantly, in one’s own mind.

As with all major first steps, there is a certain amount of risk, and the need to proceed slowly. Individuality, as in all important things, takes time.

It is very easy when you are around a specific group of people, in a new environment, to attempt to assimilate with them, in short, to become part of the campus environment, and most importantly, in one’s own mind.

In short, to become part of the important things, takes time. Proceed slowly. Individuality, as in all important things, takes time for one's own "expressive individuality." This would mean doing something you're not certain about, putting yourself out there, being a little bit selfish and others may not like this. After all, you're giving into their peer pressure gives them the individuality they think they need. By suddenly not conforming to their wishes (C'mon, your studying can wait, we're having a beer bash!" or "You mean you never fooled around with girls! Wow! Your coin collection can wait."

Meet Annabelle, you'll have more fun with her.)

You are suddenly adding attention to your own needs and taking from their needs. They will now have to develop their own individuality from within.

Enough talk, most readers think the universe is filled with people who have not read this article... Why? Why you might have allowed them to do so.

Essentially, in one's own mind, everything stated by him having no basis in fact. Well, let's try a small, highly beneficial exercise.

1—Visualize what you see yourself doing. You want to be a bit selfish and others may not like this. Do one of those things once a day, forever. It could be just spending some time with yourself in a hidden, private place.

2—Ask yourself how secure you feel as the growing "you." If you are not happy, why? If you are happy why have you allowed people to affect your decision-making?

3—Form your theory of what kind of individual you will be by the end of the school year. At the midterm observe if you are "on your way" to becoming that individual. Re-try this exercise again and note the change in your answers.

Most important of all, realize that you are a truly unique, interesting individual, just give yourself a chance, baby yourself, if you don't, who will? As of course, don't fall into a crowd, leave that to the people who have not read this article... Let's Talk.

America Is Beautiful, Not to Mention Blessed

By Matthew Gaglio and Cheryl Dininno

If I was to proclaim "America is beautiful" to the encounters I encounter, I suppose that some would agree, others would be vague theory as God or other aware of what was going on in America and as well believe that the earth is the center of universe. We can prove that there is a God and present, this supreme being. We believe that they lived based on their own, their own. We believe that the earth is the center of universe and is flat. America has been richly blessed throughout its short life because its people then were aware of its future richness and its destiny. We know and definitely all we do not into motion. My main point is this, if we deviate from this which we know is right as we go into the past and still do at present, then the result of us (Americans) being left to our own careless actions will be catastrophic and has proven so. We, people, are future America. We dictate the happenings of tomorrow through our actions today. God bless America in the past according to the basis of the creation of out夃. What are our connections? Or, do we even have any? Think about it and REMEMBER, let us keep the blessing.

Matthew Gaglio and Cheryl Dininno are both undergraduates at SUNY Stony Brook.

DALLAS, TX (CPS)—The Republican Party, never known as a haven for college-aged activists, developed a key role for youth at last week's convention: The signs, banners, well-rehearsed demonstrations and chants of "four more years" were all the work of a scrupulously-organized group of 2,000 young volunteers.

On the night of President Reagan's renomination, for example, about 1,000 young people jammed the convention floor waving banners and signs, snaked through the delegates for exactly 15 minutes, and then, on a pre-arranged signal from a campaign official, left the floor.

And though the huge delegation of young people did lend some moments of spontaneity to the convention—young Republicans were responsible for entertaining sideshows like a group of "Fritzbusters" commandos and a clique called "Coneheads for Reagan"—it was most significant for its visibility in a party where previously it had been invisible.

The youth leaders themselves attribute it to a growing conservatism among college students.

"People my age have only seen two administrations, the Carter failure and the Reagan success," explained Patrick Mizell, 20, the Texas state coordinator for the Reagan-Bush campaign. "I think the man has done miracles," added Carey Ewing of the Young Republicans, the more moderate of the party's two youth organizations. "I'm better off now than I was four years ago. I believe in hard work. I don't believe in getting something for nothing."

Fifty percent of the nation's 18-to-29-year-olds would vote for Reagan if the election were held today, according to the latest CBS/New York Times poll.

The party's youth wing has ambitious plans to campaign on about 150 campuses in swing states to make sure people don't change their minds.

"We're going out there and push our case," said Jack Abramoff, head of the College Republicans, the party's conservative youth group.

The College Republicans hope to register nearly 200,000 youths before the election. Abramoff is behind the "Fritzbusters" campaign as well, which will also tour campuses this fall.

"I can't tell you how much money was spent," said Abramoff, referring to the "Fritzbusters" campaign. "I don't know how much money was spent on the convention floor."

A support group donated an old ambulance to transport the four Fritzbusters, and Yale student Paul Eirckson wrote lyrics, sung to the "Ghostbusters" melody, that goes in part: "If there's something strange in America, who you gonna call? Fritzbusters! If your tax rates are high, why, up in the sky, who you gonna call? Fritzbusters!"

A GOP delegate hopes to make a Fritzbusters video for M-TV according to Fritzbuster Kim Manifold, who by day is a University of Texas student.

On a more somber note, Reagan youth leaders also will stage a "Liberation Day" on Oct. 25, when American students who were in Grenada at the time of the 1983 U.S. invasion will speak at more than 100 college rallies around the nation.

Many of the young delegates were looking farther into the future. In the rife speculation about who would be the 1988 GOP nominee, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York was a clear favorite among the youth groups.

"We are the party of these people's future," echoed Abramoff later. "We're going to explain to them to vote for technology, expansion. The Democrats are the party of no hope. We're growth-oriented, caring about solutions."

He saw young people's conservatism as "a revolution against the liberal establishment" and a vote for "absolute values" like bans on abortion and laws that enforce "God, goodness and light."

Such laws would be "instructive" laws, Abramoff explained when asked if they might not be the same kinds of government interference in individual's lives the party platform decries.

Detroit—The Detroit Tigers won their first American League East championship since 1972 last night as Randy O'Neal, making him first major league start, pitched seven scoreless innings and the Tigers beat the Milwaukee Brewers 3-0.

Detroit, which has been in first place every day this season, is the first major league team to clinch a division title this season. Lance Parrish drove in two runs and Tom Brookens belted a solo homer for Detroit as O'Neal and Willie Hernandez combined on a six-hitter.

O'Neal, 1-0, who was recalled from Evansville of the Class AAA American Association on Sept. 5, scattered four hits, walking one and striking out six.

Hernandez combined on a six-hitter.

At the start of the eighth inning, a large detail of police marched out and ringed the field.

Tigers—Darryl Strawberry opened the ninth inning home run hitting off Philadelphia the New York Mets to a 2-2 victory over Philadelphia Phillies last night and kept alive the team's slim hope of catching the Chicago Cubs in the National League East.

Philadelphia's two-out ninth-inning home run hit the New York Mets to a 2-2 victory over Philadelphia's last night and kept alive the team's slim hope of catching the Chicago Cubs in the National League East.

Philadelphia's 23rd homer left the Mets eight games behind the Cubs and kept the magic number for Chicago to clinch the division at four. Any combination of Cub victories and Mets losses totaling four would give the division title to Chicago. The Mets have 10 games left to play, the Cubs 13.

Forecaster Rusty Staub opened the ninth inning with a single off Philadelphia reliever Larry Andersen, 3-4. Wally Backman sacrificed pinch-runner Ron Gardenhire to second and Mookie Wilson, who had tied the game with a three-run double in the seventh, was intentionally walked.

SB Women Run

The Stony Brook women's cross country team placed

To Victory in X-C

By Jim Passano

The Stony Brook women's cross country team placed first this past Saturday at the Wagner College Cross

Country Invitational. The Patriots had only 19 points against them, well ahead of the 69 received by second place Fordham University.

Stony Brook had 13 women running in the race, five of them finished in the top 10. Three of them directly behind Whitney, who finished the course in 20.13. Taking the second place spot was Mary Dolan, in at 20.13. Behind her was Maureen Lyons with a 3.25 mile time of 20:20. Fourth place kudos went to Donna Lyons. Lyons was the last runner to finish the course in under 21 minutes; her time was 20.31.

Megan Brown, the other top ten finisher, came in in the number nine position, followed five seconds later by Sue Carrado, finishing 11th at 21.27.

The next Patriot finisher was Marie Bernard, who finished 12th with a time of 22:13. Laura Lekich finished 20th. Patriots runners Chris Tierney and Liz Kreinmen finished 30th and 34th respectively. The remaining three Patriots, Ken Kehoe, Chris Byrne and Clare Lipper, finished in the low to high 40's.

SB Women’s Tennis Drops Third

Patriots Suffer Third Straight Loss at Hands of Wagner, 6-3

By Jim Passano

The Stony Brook women’s tennis team was defeated for the third time this season yesterday, in what Patriot Coach Rich L’Hommedieu described as a “war.” The Lady Bears went down by Wagner College in a 6-3 match in Staten Island.

In the first singles match, Chrissie Goodman was able to overcome her opponent in two sets. Goodman took the first set 7-5 and also the second 6-4. Team member Lisa Pisano felt that Goodman’s win was impressive, “Chri was down three love in the first set and played really well,” she said.

Unfortunately, Pisano was not as lucky as Goodman, as she lost the second singles match. She dropped the contest in three sets. In the first set, Pisano lost 6-4. The other two sets were split, each with a 6-4 final game score.

Playing in the number three spot, Ericka Iben lost in two sets with identical 6-4 scores. Sharon Marcus played number four again, after losing last Friday. Marcus won her match in two sets, 6-4, 6-4. She commented that the entire team played well. Wagner was a tough opponent,” Marcus said “the sets in the matches were close.”

Playing her first match this season, Jackie Fiore, a transfer student from Ithaca, defeated her opponent, Beth McSheeky, in three sets. Fiore dropped the opening set, 6-4. She then came back to tie the match with a 6-3 second set win. In the third and final set she blanked McSheeky, 6-0. Fiore commented on the skill of the Wagner team, “Wagner has a very good team. I think we gained experience in the match will prepare us for the next team on their level.”

In the final singles match of the day, Debbie Gruzinik also battled to a three set finish. Unfortunately, it was her opponent, Jennifer Allbrock, who took the third and final set. The result of the singles competition left the match tied three all. In order to win, Stony Brook had to take two of the three doubles matches.

In the final two doubles match, Goodman and Pisano combined to play against Chris Napoli and Mary Mrzekowski. Goodman had defeated Mrzekowski in their singles competition, and Napoli had beaten Iben earlier in the day.

Mrzekowski was able to even out the day, when she and Napoli finished out in front of Goodman and Pisano at the end of three sets. In the first set, the Lady Bears came out on top, 6-3. After that, they lost the second set, 7-5. In the final set of play, they were behind four games to one; they fought to a five to four game point, but after they won their fourth game, Wagner won their sixth to win the match.

In the final two competitions, Stony Brook lost both doubles matches. In second doubles, Marcus and Iben fought a hard three sets. They were swatted in the first, 6-1. They came back and defeated Colleen Abbate and Aubrey Hepburn with a score identical to that of the first set. In the final set, Abbate and Hepburn won six games to the Patriots’ four. To follow that disappointment, Gruzinik and Michele Caputo lost an eight-game pro-set, 8-3.

The Patriots get their next chance for a match win on Friday, when they travel to Schenectady to take on Siena College. Hopefully, they learned enough today to show coach L’Hommedieu how much of his “a lot to learn” they have understood.

By Timothy Lapham

Looking for something different to do this weekend? Why not try an auto rally? There is one being held this weekend at the Stony Brook area. You don’t need a fancy race car as you might expect, since you won’t be racing at high speeds. Time-Speed-Distance (TSD) road rallying is a real challenge, but not speed. In fact, if you go too fast you will arrive at the checkpoints too early and lose points.

All one needs to enter is a licensed, four-wheel (two motorcycles or scooters) vehicle and a friend. There is a small “tech” inspection to make sure that lights, turn signals, wipers, and brakes are working.

Dave Lapham, a nine-year rally enthusiast who is presently competing in SCCA National Pro Rally races, is competing this weekend in rally Ends. Lapham “The sport was designed for people who like to drive and have a spirit for competition. A road rally involves a tour of scenic areas of an area.

A rally is run as follows: One is given a set of instructions which a friend (referred to as the navigator) has to convey to the driver. These instructions give information such as mileages to the next instruction, directions (turn left at stop sign for example), and a diagram of the instructions complete with arrows. The complexity of these instructions can vary from very simple, to very quick, but quick (requiring fast calculations on the part of the navigator) to normal and straightforward.

“Be careful,” warned Lapham, “when entering a complex rally. You are liable to get the instruction ‘turn left at intersection’ at a place where five roads meet.” You score based on how accurately you follow the instructions. As you arrive at certain checkpoints, you are given one point for every hundredth of a minute (known as a second or later) you arrived than you were supposed to. For example, if you followed the instructions and going the exact speed you were told to, you were supposed to arrive at 3:12 PM and you arrived at 3:13 PM, you would get one hundred points. Whoever has the fewest amount of points at the end of the rally wins.

And for those thinking you can just race to the end and then sit there and wait until your arrival time before going into the checkpoint—they have checkpoints that they don’t tell you about.

As you might have guessed, the rules require two people to be in the car at all times. In addition to the car and a navigator, the only other necessities include a watch, a pencil and paper and maybe a cheap calculator. Professionals in this sport use computers and odometers accurate to the hundredth of a minute and the hundredth of a mile, and tell you incremented miles (miles travelled thus far) and decremented miles (miles to go). Doing this, however, puts you in a higher class competing against people who have been rallying for years and Lapham said “are basically a lot better than you are.”

In other words, as a novice rallies, it is best to race as one so you will be competing against people with the same amount of experience as you have.
