November Photos

In this issue's photo gallery, campus pauses only for pictures, exploring high-speed optics, welcoming family and friends, preparing a gripping theatre production, taking back the night, welcoming a visiting scientist and otherwise making the most of autumn at Oswego. If you would like to submit photos of timely activities for future issues, email pictures with a brief caption to proffice@oswego.edu.

Grant boosts locally grown produce on campus

Oswego's decade-old, farm-to-campus food program put it in the company of three other state campuses that will promote locally grown vegetables and the sustainability of healthy, local foods at all SUNY institutions. Read more >

'Wait Until Dark' calls on cast to spike adrenaline

The student honors production of "Wait Until Dark," playing Nov. 19 to 24 in Tyler Hall's lab theatre, will put the audience right on top of the thriller, and that's fine with director and senior theatre major Dana Ernest. Read more >

Prospective students attend open houses in record numbers

As the college welcomed the largest class of first-year students in 25 years this fall, three Admissions open houses aimed at students entering next fall have set or equaled records. Read more >

People in Action

In this issue, read about the recent activities of a professor of German; a physics faculty member speaking, collaborating and exploring new connections in India; an Educator of the Year from curriculum and instruction; and students presenting physics projects and advising SUNY. Read more >
