Eyes That Say I Love You

By FRED FISHER

Not too fast

I've often heard it said that eyes are windows of the soul,
And a mother tells her baby just by looking in its eyes,
In that little game of love, they play the leading role, I've studied every color, and a doctor with a single glance knows where the trouble lies,
We tell a cook that's clever that he's learnt to realize,
The wondrous charm that lies within a pair of roguish eyes,
She must Hooverize, but you can't tell a woman just by looking in her eyes.

CHORUS

Eyes that are always telling lies, naughty eyes, Eyes that are blue or grey What do they want to make those eyes at me for, at you for, Just to steal your heart a way, Eyes

that can fool the very wise, Wick-ed eyes, Eyes that can look you thru,  But of all the eyes I see, on-ly two look good to me, They're the

you?

REFRAIN

I found the end of the Rainbow, When you first smiled on me,

All my happiness came with your caress And the world was fair to see,

believe me,
