Colorful 'Cyber Skeptic' Entertains, Enlightens Class of '98

The flamboyant Clifford Stoll, the self-proclaimed "cyber skeptic" whose Internet search cracked an international espionage ring, educated and entertained graduates of SUNY Institute of Technology at Utica/Rome at the college's 24th annual commencement on May 9.

Stoll, astrophysicist, astronomer and author, had the class of '98 listening and laughing with his unusual blend of wisdom and wit. Approximately 800 graduates joined the ranks of SUNY Utica/Rome alumni as they received bachelor's or master's degrees.

Stoll was honored with an honorary Doctor of Science degree from the State University of New York. Ray Halbritter, federal representative for the Oneida Indian Nation, received an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree.

Nearly a decade ago, somewhat unwittingly, Stoll became the subject of front page headlines in publications throughout the world when his Internet search tracked a group of spies through a literal world wide computer web. The discovery of the covert operation sent shockwaves through the U.S. government's security agencies as Stoll uncovered that spies were selling sensitive information to the KGB in exchange for cocaine and money.

His best-selling book, "The Cuckoo's Egg: Tracking a Spy Through the Maze of Computer Espionage," documents how his pursuit of a 75-cent accounting error on an invoice and his diligent digging via Internet avenues led to the espionage ring. Stoll has since consulted with the National Computer Security Conference, the National Security Agency, the U.S. Department of the Treasury, the U.S. Department of Energy, the U.S. Air Force Electronic Security Command, the Office of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the International Conference on Computers and Law.

He has also authored several articles regarding computer security and computers and education and has written a second book, "Silicon Snake Oil: Second Thoughts on the Information Highway."

Stoll has become widely popular as a speaker and media guest due partly to his colorful style and provocative thoughts regarding the dangers of computer use in education. That subject was of particular interest to SUNY Utica/Rome's large group of graduates entering computer and technology-related careers.

Halbritter Recognized

the Oneida Indian Nation – and revitalized a region, as he has built a gaming enterprise that now employs more than 5,500 and has an annual payroll of more than $55 million.

It was in recognition of Halbritter's many scholarly achievements, including writings, lectures, testimonies and presentations that he was presented the prestigious honorary doctorate degree. He has become one of the world's most respected authorities and spokesmen concerning the rights of indigenous people.

Many of Halbritter's lectures and presentations have been published, including "The Economic History of the Haudenosaunee," which was presented at the United Nations Conference on Discrimination of Indigenous Peoples of the Western Hemisphere; and "Nationalism: No Longer a Domestic Dispute," presented at the New York University School of Law Symposium.

In 1995, the New York University Journal of International Law and Politics published his article, "Empowerment or Dependence? The Practical Value and Meaning of Native American Sovereignty."

Among Halbritter's many accomplishments on behalf of the Oneida Indian Nation is the recognition of the Nation's traditional government. Halbritter successfully convinced the United States government to confirm the original Native government as the legitimate representative of a Native American Nation. He also secured recognition from the U.S. government for the

Message from Alumni Association President

Fall 'Fest a Chance to Connect

Hello Alumni,

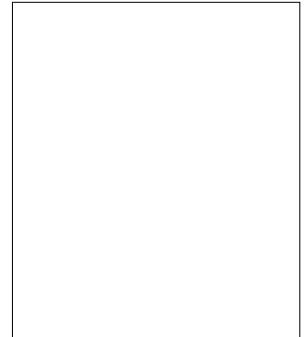

It is hard to believe that in two years the new millennium will be here. The year 2000 will also mark the 25th anniversary of the first undergraduate class that graduated from SUNY Institute of Technology at Utica/Rome -- my class. It certainly doesn't seem like so many years have passed.

There have been many changes on the campus. Fall Fest '98 Weekend, Sept. 25 to 27, 1998, is the perfect time to come back to campus and see what has happened to your alma mater and let us know what has happened to you. What are you doing? What have you accomplished? Consider attending Fall Fest this year and get back in touch with us. If you are unable to attend, please drop the Alumni Relations staff a note and let us know about all your accomplishments. Let us know what you would like your Alumni Association to do for you. Hope to hear from lots of you soon.

Sincerely,

Janet Ciccarelli '75

Dr. Kellogg Walker Elected President Of State Council of Deans of Nursing

Elizabeth Kellogg Walker, dean of the School of Nursing, has been elected to a two-year term as president of the Council of Deans of Nursing of Senior Colleges and Universities in New York state.

The council represents 44 public and private schools throughout the state that offer bachelor's and master's degrees in nursing. Its purposes are to identify issues, share ideas and experiences, and discuss matters which affect innovation and improvement of baccalaureate and higher degree programs in nursing; to collect and analyze pertinent information and conduct investigations as a basis for decisions and action; and to plan and implement programs of collaborative action which reflect responsible leadership.

PROUD PARENTS -- The SUNY Utica/Rome Financial Aid staff has adopted a 2.8-mile stretch of Route 49 in Marcy as part of the state Department of Transportation's adopt-a-highway program. This spring the group cleaned trash from the area. Message from Assistant Director Volunteer to Make a Difference

Not long ago, President Clinton, former President George Bush and General Colin Powell came together to announce a conference on volunteerism in America. Together, the three represent many constituencies in the United States and I believe the appeal for volunteers is important.

Each of us has been touched by volunteers. The Little League coach, the Girl Scout leader, chaperones at a school dance or school field trip, those generous people who organize carnivals and bake sales to raise money for many good causes. Without volunteers, we may not have been able to participate in the many activities that helped shape who we are.

It is through giving that we receive. Volunteers are needed at your church, your child's school and, of course, your Alumni Association.

I think it is important to give back to the community and our alma mater because we have all benefited so much from them. The volunteers who went before us preserved and supported the Institute that shaped us, and now I feel it is critical to make similar experiences a reality for others.

Typically, success is measured by the jobs graduates hold at various corporations, large and small. I believe the success of SUNY Institute of Technology at Utica/Rome graduates also should be measured by the success our graduates achieve through their commitment to help others as volunteers. SUNY alumni have always been there to help raise money for scholarships for current SUNY students and other worthy causes. When you think about that, it comes as no surprise that many of us step forward to volunteer as alumni.

The Alumni Relations staff is looking for volunteers to help mentor students with the Alumni Career Network, help organize class reunions during Fall Fest weekend, or assist on an association committee. If you have considered giving some time back to SUNY Utica/Rome, now is the perfect time to make that telephone call. Please contact me at (315) 792-7113 or e-mail me at prattt@sunyit.edu. Perhaps you can help in the office, work on an event, or talk to a current SUNY student about your career field.

I look forward to hearing from you. I hope to see all of you at Fall Fest '98, Sept. 25 to 27, 1998.

Iroquois Confederacy for the first time since the American Revolutionary War. The Oneida Indian Nation has regained, for the first time in 200 years, sovereign, traditional hunting and fishing rights for Native Americans of the Six Nations Confederacy in New York state. Halbritter also negotiated New York state's first casino gaming compact and serves as Chief Executive Officer of the gaming facility. He has also spearheaded the reacquisition of aboriginal land for the Oneida Nation.

Under Halbritter's leadership, the Oneida Indian Nation has fulfilled long-held territorial, social services, cultural, and economic development goals; these efforts have dramatically improved the quality of life and long-term outlook of the Oneida People.

Faculty and Staff Earn Honors

President Peter J. Cayan also presented the State University of New York Chancellor's Award to two members of the college's professional staff. The Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching was awarded to Kenneth E. Martin, of Boonville, associate professor of business/public management. The Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Professional Service was awarded to James J. Klein, of New Hartford, the college's athletic director.

College Recognizes Distinguished Citizens

Three area residents who have distinguished themselves through their outstanding contributions to the community were recognized at the annual commencement ceremony.

Those being honored with the college's Distinguished Service Award were: Susan E. Cooper, of New Hartford, a child life specialist and family care provider at St. Elizabeth's Hospital; Nancy Dubner, of Clinton, founder and president of the Mohawk Valley Institute for Learning in Retirement at SUNY Utica/Rome and a retired executive with the New York Power Authority; and James G. Hill, of New Hartford, business development representative with Herkimer County Trust, former dean of administration at Herkimer County Community College and retired U. S. Army colonel.

SUNY Health Center Ranks Number One in Student Survey

In a recently released survey by the American College Testing Association, the SUNY Utica/Rome Health Center received the highest satisfaction rating from students among 27 State University campuses.

The Health Center is operated under the direction of Geraldine Capraro, who has been with SUNY Utica/Rome since 1975, and has seen the center grow. Many alumni were on campus when the Health Center was located in the building adjacent to the West End Brewery (now called the Saranac Brewery). The Health Center was small, staffed by a nurse, a secretary and a visiting doctor, who was at the office three days a week.

The Health Center is now located on the second floor of the Campus Center and has all the latest technology. Staff members include, Capraro, director; Barbara Cox, a registered nurse; Susan Evans and Annemarie Giannola, part-time nurses; and Stephanie Kelly, secretary. Students who require an EKG, can obtain one at the Health Center, which also has an oximeter (infrared technology) to measure blood oxygen, a hemoglobinometer to check the iron in blood (anemic), and a plumo aid compressor that nebulizes medications such as albuterol (inhalers available) for asthmatics. Computerized biofeedback is available for stress and pain relief. The staff can also perform an instant strep test (five minutes) and a four-minute pregnancy test. The health center does not offer x-rays or allergy shots. Students are required to have some health insurance. Those who need health care coverage may purchase the Student Health Insurance plan offered by the college.

The overall emphasis of the Health Center's approach to good health is to develop the student's awareness of, and responsibility for, his/her own health care. The Health Center staff's two primary goals are to assist each individual in achieving and maintaining his/her level of personal health; and to foster the development of health awareness through educational programs, screening clinics, health literature and tapes.

During the last fiscal year (July 1, 1997 to June 30, 1998) gifts received by the Foundation provided support for academic merit scholarships, emergency student loans, faculty development grants, cultural programs and campus events, as well as operational support. The milestones reached during 1997-98 permit all of us who have a relationship with the Institute to pause and express appreciation for what you have made possible, and to feel exhilarated by its momentum. The graphs below illustrates the tremendous progress that you have advanced at SUNY Utica/Rome:

As announced in the Spring 1998 issue of Alumni News, SUNY Utica/Rome's undergraduate Health Services Management (HSM) program is in the process of applying for a membership in the Association of University Programs in Health Administration (AUPHA). AUPHA is a prestigious, nationally-recognized, professional organization for health management programs. An important part of the AUPHA application process is to evaluate the program from the perspectives of graduates. To evaluate current trends in the academic program, surveys were sent this past February to 1987 through 1997 HSM graduates.

About 40 (142) percent of the graduates completed the survey. A summary of the survey findings appear below:

- 92.25 percent of all graduates are currently employed.
- The most frequent types of facilities currently employing HSM SUNY Utica/Rome graduates are: nursing homes, hospitals, insurance firms, managed care organizations, and private businesses.
- Salary ranges reported were $20,000 to $34,999 (32 percent) and $35,000 to $50,000 (30 percent).

- 34.8 percent of graduates have a nurse home administrator's license.
- 81.7 percent of graduates completed an internship as part of the HSM program.
- 67 percent of graduates said they pursue Continuing Education Units.
- 34 percent of graduates have continued their formal education.
- 56 percent of graduates are involved in professional organizations.
- 73 percent of graduates said they strongly agreed that the HSM program enhanced their ability to succeed professionally.

The HSM faculty is grateful to all of the graduates who participated in this survey. They also thank Janice Havranek (M.S.B.M. '98), who helped design the survey, and analyzed the survey data. We have shared the survey results with members of the HSM Advisory Council, and have included them in our self-study guide in our AUPHA application. An update of the AUPHA application process will be published in the Spring 1999 edition of Alumni News. Anyone who would like additional information about the survey or the application process, contact Gary Scherzer (fgds@sunyit.edu) or Sarah Laditka (laditks@sunyit.edu).

Alumni To Help Bolster College Admissions Efforts

WHAT: An alumni initiative

HOW: Send us the names of potential students

WHY: These will be our best prospects for future classes. A large number of SUNY Utica/Rome students know someone who is currently a student or previously attended SUNY Utica/Rome. Students who attend the Institute are often influenced by friends, family members and acquaintances.

The names you can provide to the admissions office will assist their recruitment efforts. By providing the names of those you think will benefit from a SUNY Utica/Rome education you are connected to the success of the student. Once you have supplied the names of potential students, the admissions office will do the rest. They will send mail to the students to encourage them to consider SUNY Utica/Rome. The students will receive a catalog which highlights the programs available at the college. An invitation will be sent out to the student inviting him/her to the college's open house.

Please fill out the form below and return it to the Alumni Relations Office, SUNY Institute of Technology at Utica/Rome, P.O. Box 3050, Utica, NY 13504-3050. Please feel free to e-mail the information to me at pratt@sunyit.edu. If you have any questions or concerns, please call the Alumni Relations Office at (315) 792-7113. Telecom Professionals, Students 'Re-Engineering'

By Patrick W. Fitzgibbons, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor of Telecommunications

The role of the telecommunications professional has certainly changed over just the past few years and it will undoubtedly continue to do so at an even faster rate as we race toward the next millennium. Therefore, it is critical that both current students as well as telecommunications alumni share in this "re-engineering" process in order to ensure a prominent role for themselves in the present and in the future. This article is intended to identify those critical areas that we, at SUNY Institute of Technology, have found to be among the most insightful with respect to the metamorphosis which is occurring within the domain of the evolving telecommunications professional.

First and foremost we need to take a stab at defining what constitutes a telecommunications professional. As one such definition consider the following description which we in the telecommunications department at SUNY have adopted: "a telecommunications professional is actively involved in the application of technical knowledge and methodology combined with managerial decision-making skills in support of telecommunications-related activities (e.g. transmission engineering, network management, local and wide area networking, analysis and operational troubleshooting). It is a description that lies in the occupational area between the pure technologist and the engineer, with the primary focus rooted in the application of telecommunications-related technology."

Pursuing this definition in more detail, this model (see Figure 1) attempts to differentiate between the educational equivalency of what traditionally constitutes required job skills from that of a theoretical background in a technically related academic discipline such as telecommunications. The categorical typology (e.g. 1, 2, 3, 4) refers to the Appendix which includes representative job descriptions for those individuals who have been prepared in an institution of higher learning for a technically related discipline which, in this instance, is Telecommunications.

This scale represents a somewhat more streamlined and idealized model of the telecommunications technology spectrum ranging from the "pure" technician to the "pure" technologist. The farther one moves to the left of the scale, the more the job function requires the application of a particular skill set as opposed to requiring both a technical basis along with a "problem solving" ability. In terms of the educational background it is assumed that the two-year associate's degree leads to the job function most commonly referred to as "technician," whereas a four-year degree in telecommunications can prepare someone to follow a career path that eventually leads to that of a telecommunications manager or on a parallel track to the telecommunications engineer both of which occupy the domain of a telecommunications professional. It has been aptly pointed out that both types of positions require a strong technical foundation and a problem solving orientation. This would seem to indicate that what is needed to be successful is more than simply a passing knowledge of the applications of theory as it relates to the highly complex telecommunications field.

Telecommunications professionals must not only be technically competent but they must also possess the "mindset" that emphasizes the application of technology and, consequently, they must have a very broad understanding of their discipline. This would require the individual have a working knowledge of both the immediate and tangible. Moreover, it is not a mere coincidence that the gap between the two-year technician degree and the four-year telecommunications degree has widened. The difference is not merely accountable to the two additional years of college. It has more to do with rigorous analytical attributes required of the four-year student while at the same time maintaining the ever important "hands-on" education often relegated to that of purely technical schools which do not offer an interdisciplinary telecommunications degree.

Added to the mix is a strong business foundation that includes economics, accounting, financial management, and quantitative analysis.

To a large degree the situation that graduates of SUNY Institute of Technology have faced at is representative of the majority of four-year college graduates who have a technical degree which there are many more positions than graduates available to fill them. In other words it's an ideal time to be a telecommunications graduate. Many of the positions that our graduates have been hired to fill include those that were traditionally filled by electrical engineering graduates (BSEE) and as a result the average starting salary has risen precipitously. The reason that so many of our graduates have found the terrain once occupied by the electrical engineering graduate to be so accessible has to do more with their broad-based, practical knowledge of the telecommunications field than any other single attribute. The end result is that while many electrical engineering programs at some prestigious universities have been scaled back recently and in some cases even discontinued, telecommunications degree programs, like the one at SUNY Institute of Technology, have been quick to "pick up the slack."

In conclusion, telecommunications professionals find themselves poised at a crucial moment, in preparing to meet the needs of their respective stakeholders. Senior level managers are becoming acutely aware of the need for a pool of technically oriented professionals who espouse the necessary skills and business acumen to empower the organization. By continuing to evolve, today's telecommunications professional can take the necessary steps to prepare oneself in order to effectively manage the constant change and altering workplace arrangements. The bottom line is that it is a universally accepted truth that the individual is ultimately responsible for continually developing and investing in his or her own "human capital."

strategic direction of their operation while continually redefining how to most readily apply technology to attain their organization's "bottom line" objectives. Herein the notion of "bottom line" is not merely a profitability indicator for one's organization but more appropriately a return on investment specific to telecommunications related expenditures.

Turning back the clock to 1985 which was the inaugural year for the SUNY Institute of Technology telecommunications program, conceivably the role of the telecommunications professional was less clearly defined than it is today. As technology has advanced over the last two decades, while the role of the telecom professional has become more sophisticated, demanding and at the same time it could be argued it is more

Owens to Retire from School of Nursing After 18 Years

Janet E. Owens, staff assistant in the School of Nursing, will retire Oct. 1, following 18 years of service to the Institute of Technology.

During her time at SUNY Utica/Rome, Janet's primary responsibility has been to provide professional support to all student-related activities in the nursing program. Nursing alumni across the state know Janet well. She has been the coordinator of academic services to both on-campus and outreach nursing students in Canton, Watertown, Syracuse, and the Capital District. Janet has given each student individualized, accurate information, advice, and counsel regarding course schedules, registration procedures, academic requirements, and policies established by the faculty.

Elizabeth Kellogg Walker, dean of the School of Nursing, said that Janet has made superb contributions to the undergraduate and graduate nursing programs. "I have never witnessed, nor have I ever received mention of, Janet Owens not responding to a student in any other manner but that of politeness, patience, and professionalism. Interpersonally, she demonstrates inordinate tact and graciousness. She knows most of the students personally, even when she has only interacted with them by long distance telephone. Students repeatedly mention to me that 'Janet is a gem,' and how grateful they are for her attention to their individual needs."

Janet and her husband, Dick, will move to North Carolina.

Local Firms, School of Business Combine to Host Cocktail Evening

The School of Business and Public Management held its annual "cocktail evening" at the Yahnundasis Golf Club on April 17, 1998. Several local employers, members of the Chamber of Commerce, SUNY Utica/Rome faculty, staff, and graduate students attended (126 people in total).

The yearly get-together provided an opportunity for students, faculty, college administrators and area business, industry and civic leaders to network, socialize, and enjoy an evening of food, refreshments, and relaxation.

The event was co-sponsored by Bullock Co., Par Technology, Barone Howard Hilton & Powers, and the Graduate Business Association (GBA).
