NEW LOOK FOR FMCC CAMPUS

Vol. 2 Issue 7

By Karen Ann Young

The FMCC Campus Improvement Committee, which was initiated in October of 1987, has plans for a bright new look for our campus in the near future. There is much to be done, however, and you might be able to help.

The final cost of the project is expected to be anywhere from $10,000 to $25,000, depending on available funds and how much we want to accomplish.

The first area of concentration in the improvement effort will be the college courtyard. The brick in the square will be removed and will be replaced by an information center. It will be surrounded by rock gardens, with lovely plants and flowers. Wouldn’t it be nice to have attractive benches, trees, and modern waste receptacles throughout the area, where students might have the opportunity to sit and visit with friends during common hours in the warmer weather, rather than mull about the halls of the classroom building, or sitting on the steps of the courtyard?

The seating around the clock tower will be replaced and there are plans to plant a large evergreen tree, which can be festively decorated at Christmas. Another idea is erecting a memorial, dedicated to staff members who have passed away, and to the past presidents of the college.

Fund raising for the beautification project has not been finalized. There is no funding available from the college budget, but other means of obtaining money have already begun. Circle K started a fund raising effort, and the SOH will supply $2500. The committee is eager to see this project get underway, pending okay from the Board of Trustees, and available funding. Any ideas as to how the committee might gain funds to help give this project the boost it desperately needs are welcome. The committee urges every organization affiliated with FMCC, as well as outside sources such as private individuals, private industries, clubs, and interested community groups to pitch in and help to enhance the beauty and pride of our campus.

It would be wonderful to see visible progress by our 25th year anniversary, but without funding, the project is at a standstill. Just imagine what a lovely campus we might have, with lush green grass and beautiful flowers throughout the new barren courtyard. In the fall, the foliage and rock gardens will further enhance the layout, and the decorated evergreen will bring a little Christmas spirit in the the present final exam-week blues.

If you have any suggestions to offer, please feel free to talk with any one of the committee members. The Raider Times will keep everyone informed on the project as it progresses. Committee members are as follows:

Helen Failing
Ron Kosiinski
John Boshart
Richard Teaff
Art Recesso
Art Cleghorn
Art D’Ambrosio
Frank Mahar
Bill Weidner

Have a very joyous Christmas and the happiest new year.

AFTER COLLEGE?

We like to refer to PACE as "Preparing After College for Employment" which is what Project PACE is all about. PACE is funded through NYS Department of Social Services. Its goal is to enable individuals on public assistance to become economically independent through college education, training, and employment. To be eligible for PACE, a person needs to be receiving ADC (Aid to Dependent Children) assistance, have children under 6 years of age, and have a strong interest in obtaining a college education.

Depending upon the needs of the student, support services are provided to help facilitate pursuit of a college education. These services include, but are not limited to:

- Academic Planning
- Preparatory coursework
- Tutorial assistance
- Financial planning
- Personal counseling
- Career planning, job search, placement, and advocacy assistance

One of the most satisfying services of the PACE program is the sense of acceptance and friendship that develops from students who share similar situations.

If you are interested in joining PACE, contact Nancy Ellermann, PACE Coordinator, or Diana Putnam, Career Planning/Placement Specialist at 370 or 371 or stop by our office in L227 of the library.

THE DRINKING AGE

By Frank DuChene

When we become eighteen years of age, we are suddenly expected to behave as adults. We are supposed to drop out of school, get married, live on our own, vote, fight and die for our country, and be responsible for our actions. We are not, however, old enough to have a cold one with a friend.

At eighteen, we are trusted to know what to do and what not to do. If we are to be trusted, we should know this, shouldn’t we also know if we can have a drink?

When was the last time you saw a young adult with a bottle of champagne? Getting married is one of the most important decisions any of us will ever have to make. The traditional bottle of champagne wouldn’t even be legal for the nursery children under twenty-five years of age. When we are eighteen, we can move out of our parents’ house, get a job and own our own place to live. Can we have a friend over for a six pack and Monday night football? We are trusted to get the bills paid, but not to drink a beer with a friend.

When we are eighteen, we are expected to go places like Vietnam to die for our country. We are supposedly mature enough to be subjected to a situation such as this, but we can’t have a drink!

The drinking age was raised to cut down on the number of drunk driving incidents, yet the majority of DWI convictions in the United States involved those who were over twenty-one years of age. It looks to me as though our elders should worry more about themselves and not as much about us.

It just doesn’t seem right that an eighteen-year-old is trusted to make adult decisions that could make or break the rest of his or her life, and possibly other peoples’ lives as well, but not be able to decide if he or she can have a drink.

When we see our elders ten, twenty, and even thirty years getting convicted of DWI, we can’t help to wonder, how old is old enough?

International Students: If you are planning to leave the U.S. during the winter break and return to FMCC for the spring semester, please note the following:

All international students having F-1 immigration status must have the following documents in order to re-enter the U.S. after a temporary absence:

1. A valid passport and a valid visa
2. Your Form I-20 ID copy (yellow card) if you were issued one upon your entry into the U.S.
3. Your valid I-20 (white paper), endorsed on page 4 by Mr. Martin

It is imperative that you see Mr. Martin in this regard before you leave the country.

If your visa (the stamp in your passport) has expired or will expire while you are outside the U.S., you must revalidate your visa at a U.S. consular office in your country or, in whatever country you will be spending your vacation. The documents needed for visa revalidation are:

1. A valid passport
2. Your valid I-20 (white paper), endorsed on page 4 by Mr. Martin
3. Proof of financial capacity to continue your studies

It is your responsibility and in your interest to ascertain that your immigration affairs are in order before you leave the country. If you have any questions in this regard, please see Mr. Martin in the International Student Office, room C-137B.

CIRCLE K CLUB

The Circle K Club recently held its annual installation of Officers Dinner at the Holiday Inn in Johnstown. Fifteen members of the club attended. The Amsterdam Kiwanis Club, which sponsors the Circle K Club, showed its support with a turnout of 16 members. Various guests and spouses were also in attendance.

A special guest in attendance was James Sartoris, Lieutenant Governor of the Mohawk Division. Sartoris displayed his support of Circle K’s Campus Beautification project with a $100 donation.

Assistant District Administrator for Circle K, Donald Forsyth, installed Leslie Gardner as President, Michael Hauser as Vice President, Roland Lavigne as Treasurer and Anne Krawiecki as Secretary.

The FMCC Circle K Club was represented at the annual New York State Speaking Leadership Conference held at the Georgian Resort Hotel in Lake George, N.Y. Those in attendance included Leslie Gardner, Michael Hauser, Roland Lavigne, Anne Krawiecki, Kesang Dorjee, Betty Abrams, and Peggy Frazier. Circle K advisors Mr. Jackson Douglass and Mr. Gerard Roux attended with their wives.

The first evening (Friday) was spent getting acquainted with members of other Circle K clubs. To assist in this, each club developed a game, complete with prizes, to provide a fund raiser for disaster relief. Over $800 was raised for the victims of Hurricane Gilbert in Jamaica.

The conference ended with a farewell conference on Sunday. Everyone seemed to come away from the conference relaxed and with a feeling of comradeship with the rest on NY Circle K. The trip home was filled with ideas for future events.

CHEM. LAB

Chem Lab
by Dr. Jane Sleazak

Lab begins
With banging drawers
And tinkling glass
And cleaning chores.

Then crystals weighed,
And liquids poured,
The flames of Bunsen burners roar.

The bubbles form,
And atoms prance,
To rhythms of Unearthly dance.

And soon, there are
Some brand-new things:
A compound formed,
A colored ring.

The mystery of
That ring of red
And crystals, blue,
Fill up my head.

And, how I wish
I understood;
The meaning of
Results, so good!
This article came from the desk of Dr. Jane Sleazak. It came from St. Clare’s Hospital, Fall 1988.

EMPHYSEMA: MAJOR SYMPTOM SHORTNESS OF BREATH

Emphysema is a chronic obstructive lung disease in which the lungs’ air sacs lose their elasticity, causing stale air to become trapped in the lungs. Sufferers cannot completely exhale carbon dioxide and replace it with fresh oxygenated air. Also, the transport of oxygen across the lungs into the blood is diminished. In severe cases, people may have a feeling of smothering with every breath.

No single cause of emphysema has been found; nearly every case can be linked to smoking. Certain cases are hereditary. Air pollutants and other dusts and fumes, along with frequent lung infections are also culprits. These irritants inflame the air passages (bronchi) leading into the lungs, causing chronic bronchitis. Mucus clogs the airways and further obstructs the air flow in and out of the lungs.

Eventually, as the airways narrow, air is trapped in the air sacs, and the walls of the sacs break down and lose their elasticity. Despite the fact that lung infections complicate the condition, emphysema is not caused by bacteria or viruses and it is not contagious.

The major symptom is shortness of breath. Often, there is a cough. In time, one tires easily and may develop an enlarged chest. Skin, lips, and nails may be tinged blue from lack of oxygen in the blood.

Most cases are detected by a combination of breathing tests to measure lung capacity, a blood test to determine oxygen content, and a chest x-ray to detect tissue changes.

Emphysema cannot be cured, nor is it reversible. Removing irritants, especially smoking, can check its progress. Air filters, air conditioners and humidifiers may be recommended. Drinking extra fluids to thin out mucus in the airway is beneficial. A balanced diet, adequate rest and supervised exercise can also help. Some patients can be taught by a therapist to use the chest and abdominal muscles to breathe more efficiently.

Several medications offer some relief by expanding airways or loosening mucus secretions. Others, relieve the feeling of breathlessness. Antibiotics fight complicating lung infections. In advanced cases, oxygen may be necessary.

Emphysema is a serious disease. However, persons who have it controlled early can lead reasonably normal lives if they follow a few simple rules. Once emphysema is fairly far advanced, normal living is limited. If you have emphysema:

1. Stop smoking.
2. Beware of second-hand smoke.
3. Remain indoors during periods of high air pollution.
4. Avoid temperature extremes that aggravate the condition.
5. Avoid overexertion, but take part in prescribed activity.
6. Follow your doctor’s advice.

Prevention leads to lung health!

1. Don’t smoke.
2. Avoid polluted air.
3. Treat respiratory illnesses promptly; recurrent colds, shortness of breath, chronic cough.

THANK YOU

By Karen Ann Young

On behalf of all Guiding Eves for the Blind students --both former and future--I would like to extend thanks to those staff, students, and faculty who so generously supported my lovely yellow friend Audrey and me in this year’s Superwalk, which was held on October 9.

I appreciate the support, emotionally with encouragement, and financially, with donations and sponsorship. Your combined efforts made it possible for me to raise $114 toward my total to this point of $534.

The money raised will help to continue and expand the very special program offered by Guiding Eyes for the Blind--that of bringing the gift of independence to blind and sight-impaired people through the eyes of highly intelligent and specially trained guide dogs like my Audrey.

If anyone is interested in learning more about GEB, please feel free to speak with me.

Again, thanks, and I look forward to your support in future Guiding Eves for the Blind Superwalks.
EDITORS CORNER

By Mercedes Culick

In a recent Ann Lander's column, a woman wrote in complaining about the way animals are treated when being used in medical research. Instead of supporting the woman's position, Ms. Lander took the opportunity to lambast animal groups for some unethical actions such as breaking into and heavily damaging medical labs. In conclusion, Ms. Lander said that she would choose humans over animals any day.

In reading this, I felt that Ms. Lander missed a few important points. Humans are animals, and humans are not all-knowing, all-perfect creatures. I'd rather spend the rest of my days with my cats than with certain humans. A cat did not annihilate six million Jews. It did not probable to execute Christians for their beliefs. A deer did not assassinate President Kennedy. Humans committed these vile acts; and humans have control over animals.

We use animals in all types of research (ladies, did you ever wonder how they test some of your cosmetics?). We wear animals on our backs (have you ever seen a picture of an animal caught in a trap?). I cannot deny the fact that using animals in medical research has helped man realize important advancements, especially in the treatment of cancer. Many forms of insulin, a life-sustaining drug for diabetics, come from animals.

I don't think, though, that man has the right to use animals in research beyond medicine. I think it's pretty damn disgusting to see animals used in the research of cosmetics and household cleaners. I am also totally against killing an animal just for their fur. When the Indians killed an animal, not one part was wasted. We turned it into a sport and practically wiped out the buffalo.

But, where do you draw the line? Who should make these major decisions? There are intelligent decision makers in our world (though sometimes I wonder), but there are also those who are selfish and foolish. They see no harm in using the precious gifts of nature in any way they see fit. We must respect animals and must teach our children to respect them also.

Animals are extremely important in our lives. We are forever calling on them to sacrifice for us. Animals have saved thousands upon thousands of humans by giving up their ultimate sacrifice—their lives. Animals also play an extremely important role in the lives of the handicapped and the elderly. Animals reduce stress and can ease high-blood pressure. When all is said and done, people would have a hard time surviving without animals. I doubt the reverse is true. I must remind you again that man is an animal. If we misuse our control over the other animals, they will slip away forever from the face of the earth. And when they are gone, guess who will soon follow.

NO WARNING

By Steve Constantine

I remember the first day I came to FMCC for a tour and how great I thought it would be. I still remember the tour guide who told us if we didn't like something to speak up and they would change it. After all, you're paying for it.

Well, I just encountered something that I don't like. I received a $5 ticket because my mother's car didn't have a permit on it. The reason I didn't have my car was that my muffler fell off and it was being repaired. This was the first time I brought her car to school and I had an 8:00 class to attend. After class, I went out to the car and found a ticket on it.

This was the first time, but like many others I have talked to, I didn't receive a warning. What choice did I have? Should I have skipped the class that I pay to go to, or paid a fine for attending?

I tried to talk to people in the Registration Department in the gym. Everyone was busy or less, "TOUGH." My friends told me not to worry about it. They had received the same ticket before and they weren't paid yet and nothing has happened.

I feel that we need to have the parking lots monitored, but I feel it's unfair not to receive a warning on a first fine. I wonder if my fines shouldn't be given out, but school officials should be a little more understanding and give out a warning first. I feel if enough people present this problem to the dean, we can change it.

EDITOR'S NOTE-- Students who do not pay their fines will not receive their final grades. Money for fines may also be deducted from grant money you receive.
FM WRESTLERS ARE LOOKING GOOD

By Rick Terwilliger

The FMCC Raider's wrestling team has started another season of hard-hitting action and by all accounts, this year's squad is looking better than ever.

The 1988 version contains a large number of freshmen, all of whom have attained excellent high school achievements in this sport. One of the returning players is also this year's captain, Rich Blair, who, is also considered the heart and soul of the team. Two transfer students are also adding more strength and experience to the squad. Rob Weeks, from Adirondack Community College, and Matt Van Housen, from Syracuse University, will prove to be invaluable to the team's success.

Returning for his second year, is coach Tom Stewart, who himself, has had a very impressive wrestling career, both in high school and in college. In fact, when he attended SUNY at Brockport, his team won the national championship three out of four years. It is hoped that the range of success he has enjoyed will continue with the Raiders.

The ultimate goal this year, according to coach Stewart, is to finish in the top five teams in the region. This goal may seem an unlikely one to some, because FMCC is one of the smallest schools in the division. But after winning their first match impressively, it seems that the FMCC Raiders are well on their way to achieving their goal.
