

Open Access Policy: Genesee Community College

Genesee Community College (GCC) defines open access (OA) as a philosophy and publishing practice that makes the results of research and other scholarly pursuits available to be distributed online, free of cost or other access barriers.

Open Educational Resources (OER) are defined as a specific item published as open access that is intended and/or used for teaching, learning, and research purposes. OER items may take the form of text or media or any other format that is typically copyrightable but have instead been assigned an open license (or similar), such as those defined by Creative Commons.

GCC, in accordance with SUNY efforts to further the use and create OA/OER, supports and encourages both the use and creation of this kind of academic and scholarly resources by its faculty and staff to provide students quality and sustainable options with more inclusive and accessible options. The institution acknowledges the right of creators to assign Creative Commons licenses to their works, but also the right of creators to use traditional copyrights as well.