

abstract.txt

We study the three-dimensional structure of the Large Magellanic Cloud, using observations of classical Cepheid variable stars. Optical band observations were taken from the OGLE-III survey and near-infrared observations from the CPAPIR survey. Both planar and ellipsoidal models are fit to the galaxy in order to obtain inclination and position angles.