Whereas, many Brockport students encounter serious problems in selecting and enrolling in courses suitable to their educational purposes because they have inadequate information and advice on courses; and

Whereas, in many cases, students may obtain the best information on courses by attending several early meetings of them; and

Whereas, in many cases, the student may obtain the best advice on these problems by consulting appropriate members of the faculty and administration after having attended those course sessions;

Therefore, be it hereby resolved that the fourth and fifth day of classes of each semester shall be designated for special conferences by students with members of the faculty and administration on these problems; and

That, all faculty members shall be available for such conferences in their offices between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. on those days, except while meeting classes; and

That, all faculty members shall give special consideration to student requests to be absent from class for the purposes of attending such a conference if the conference unavoidably conflicts with a special class; and

That, all appropriate members of the college administration shall be available for such conferences during regular office hours; and

That, special consideration shall be given to requests for late enrollments in and withdrawals from courses as a result of these conferences; and

That, all members of the Brockport College community shall cooperate in every way possible and give all possible constructive attention to making this day of advisement conferences a successful effort to alleviate the problems of curricular disorientation, confusion, and alienation that affect many students.
