

The place I never though I would be

By Danielle DiFanne

About this time three years ago I saw this little girl.
Lost and confused she searched for herself but found no answers.
"It's true" she thought "I am no one".
Never finding the truth, and searching beyond her means,
As time ticked by she stopped to think; "am I really that lost? Am I really nothing?"
Like a lightening bolt it hit her clear, "To know every thing is not why I am here!"
I have to grow up with time and discover the world.
There is still so much that I have not done yet,
I have no idea where I want to go next or what I want to be, but then again It's not my job to know all; It's only my job to be me.
