The Teachers Pledge

REVERENTLY do I pledge myself to the whole hearted service of childhood.

EARNESTLY will I strive to keep my body, mind and affections fit for childhood's service.

CLEANLY will I live so that I may prove worthy of the faith reposed in me by the children whose lives I am to fashion.

JUSTLY and patiently will I deal with each child so that the best in him will blossom and bear fruit.

CHEERFULLY will I cooperate with my co-workers to further the welfare and progress of the children entrusted to us.

DILIGENTLY will I prepare myself and practice my profession as though I expected to be a teacher all my life.

GLADLY do I accept this opportunity: through the nurture of its children, to leave this world better than I found it.

—Richard K. Piez
