FACULTY FACTS AND STAFF STUFF

for week of Oct. 31-Nov. 6

LOOKING BACK --

Larry Sitterlee, vice-chairman of the Technical Institute Administrative Council of the American Society of Engineering Education, recently attended the executive committee meeting of ASEB in Denver. Larry is also editor of the Technical Institute Newsletter.

Evelyn Katusak and Eunice Richardson were in New York City last week for a Communications Council on Guidance for Women. A pilot State Guidance Center for Women has opened at Rockland Community College to provide vocational counseling to women returning to the employment market, and the state hopes to set up additional centers elsewhere in the state. Broome Tech was one of four community colleges represented at the meeting in New York.

Marvin Behr was elected president of the State University Public Relations Council at the recent fall conference in New York City.

Circle K Club collected $220.10 at last week's talent show. This is the largest total ever collected at this presentation and slightly more than triple last year's.

LOOKING AT THIS WEEK--

Dave Reynolds to attend a State University Financial Aids Conference in Albany on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday.

Harold Hickey and five students will represent the local Mu Eta Chapter at a regional workshop of Phi Theta Kappa at Cobleskill on Friday and Saturday. The students are Anthony Funaro, Nancy Kodey, Joyce Nagle, Karen Sunderland and Sue Barath.

Ed Daugherty will be at the annual conference of the New York Association for Educational Data Systems on Wednesday and Thursday in Syracuse. He will participate in two clinic sessions on "The Computer in Education."

Toni Gregg will attend the New York State Audio-Visual Association Convocation at Grossingers Tuesday through Friday. She is secretary of the organization.

LOOKING AHEAD--

President Tyrrell will be in Poughkeepsie next week for a week-long meeting at the IBM Education Center there. The meeting is on data processing for presidents of small colleges and universities.

Nan Newman will be back at her desk next week after a vacation visit with her son and his wife at College Station, Texas. She returns home Saturday.

LOOKING FATHER AHEAD--

The first Broome Tech Fall Weekend is coming up Nov. 11-12, with the King Tech Dance on the Friday night at the Fountains Pavilion and an Artist Series Concert in the gym on the Saturday night. The Artist Series is bringing in the Brandywine Singers, who made such a tremendous hit at the Alumni Dinner-Dance last spring. They're great!

The basketball season is getting close, with the Hornets' opening game scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 19, here against Lackawanna Junior College. The Hornets, incidentally, have a scrimmage at Harpur Thursday of this week at 5 p.m.

The Broome Tech Players get going in two weeks also, with two one-act plays on Nov. 17 and 18 at 8:15 p.m. They are "A Phoenix Too Frequent" by Christopher Fry and "Escorial" by Michel de Ghelderode. Their full-length plays for this year are Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" March 3, 4 and 5 and the Fantastiks on May 12, 13 and 14.

Did you know that the biggest demand among companies seeking to hire liberal arts graduates of four-year colleges was for accountants, the Yale University Office of Counseling and Placement revealed a year ago?

But business and industry got only about 10% of the Yale graduates. Another 10% went into military service and a full two-thirds went on to graduate school.

The spoiling of children by parents is nothing new, although this generation of parents may have refined the art to a new peak. Today's practice of the art is neatly expressed by John Brooks in his new book "The Great Leap," which deals with the past 25 years in America.

"Parents scarcely bring up children now," he says. "They finance them."

Discrepancies are nothing new in the English language. But the privilege of inconsistency is abused by identifying a person from the Philippine Islands as a Filipino.
